A New Line.
Richberg-Borah, Nice Fight.
Don't Forget Busy NRA.
In Germany, What?

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

HERE'S A LINE, from Washington, that you never read in any newspaper before:

"The government's Home Owners Loan Corporation has lent more than ONE THOUSAND MILLION DOLLARS of public money, to protect citizens from loss of their homes by mortgage foreclosure."

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT is sailing the seas on a United States man-of-war, catching "big barracuda," and getting the rest he needs.

At home, Donald R. Richberg, chairman of the new Industrial Emergency Committee and a sort of "president ad interim," is fighting it out with Senator William E. Borah, from Idaho. The latter is one of the only remaining advocates of the theory that an ordinary American citizen is something more than a pawn in the game of politics.

OPPOSITION IS useful, always welcome, to real fighters. The President, Mr. Richberg and General Johnson will be grateful to Senator Borah for at last "saying something."

THE SENATOR said "something," and he said plenty. He accuses the Roosevelt administration of "stealing away man's rights in the name of public interest, and taxing him to death in the name of recovery." He says:

"Those bureaus of the new bureaucracy are innumerable. The expense is intolerable. Their power is dangerous and threatening."

MR. RICHBERG calls attacks on the new era "pitiful and partisan." There is no such thing as a dictator ruling in America, says Mr. Richberg, and to comfort the prosperous, who pay the bills, he assures them that the New Deal checks, frightens, terrifies and holds in awe the "reds" and "anarchy."

Taxpayers reply that if, with their money, you put everybody on the payroll, "reds" and "anarchy" must keep quiet for a while, because they will be busy drinking beer with the "easy money." The question, according to these worried, tax-paying prosperous ones is: "How long can you keep paying out the billions? And what will happen, what will 'reds' and 'anarchists' do when the beer money suddenly stops?"

GENERAL JOHNSON makes it clear that NRA will not be moved to right or left, up or down, by attacks from Senator Borah, or praise from Mr. Richberg. Yesterday NRA ordered L. Greif & Sons, Inc., operating eight clothing mills, employing four thousand workers, to pay their employes between $100,000 and $200,000 back pay as "restitution" for under payment.

If they don't pay this money within two weeks, they will lose the blue eagle, and the Attorney General will be asked to prosecute them.

NRA means to compel gentlemen in business to compete in efficiency, rather than in low wages. To allow one concern to underpay would be unfair to others compelled to obey NRA rules.

EUROPEAN NEWS is doubly complicated by the fact that you can believe little of what you read or hear.

You read that Cardinal Faulhaber has been arrested and locked up. Next day that is not so. You read of wholesale slaughter of Jews in Silesia, and an exodus of Jews. There is neither exodus nor slaughter.

Today you will read that Hitler narrowly escaped assassination. Edmund Heines, revolver in hand, was about to kill Hitler, when one of the latter's aides killed Heines. That may be true.

HOLLAND REPORTS a "mild revolutionary outbreak by Communists." Dispatches from Berlin say some of the storm troopers are howling for revenge, and "something dangerous is brewing." The storm troopers are alleged to look upon their comrades, executed with great promptness at 2 a. m. by Hitler, as "martyrs."

BUSINESS METHODS, not too clean, continue to be revealed in New York. Men selling coal to the city are accused of stealing a million dollars, and when questioned refused to sign "waivers of immunity."

Another one of New York's financial miracles occurs. A coal clerk, getting $3,000 a year, is able to put $77,000 in the bank in four years. Strange arithmetic. The business of this remarkable economical city clerk was buying coal for the city.

One of the big coal companies selling to the city carried on its payroll a certain notorious racketeer criminal. Only the weanling child will wonder how such a man could be useful to a coal company.

PITT OUSTER FOUGHT BY LABOR

Former Students Plan Petition for Reinstatement

Resentment against the University of Pittsburgh for the ousting of Dr. Ralph E. Turner, liberal faculty member, was spreading today as organized labor prepared to hold a protest meeting, and former students of Turner planned to circulate a petition denouncing the school for his removal.

Labor groups represented in the Committee of Twenty-nine, of which Turner is county chairman, have already made arrangements to assemble to protest the firing of the Pitt professor.

LEAGUE CRITICISM

This was learned at a meeting of the League for Social Justice last night at the Hiland Presbyterian Church in Perrysville, where a barrage of criticism was loosed at the Oakland school.

Among the speakers was Miss Marjorie Hanson, Pitt alumna, once president of the Women's Debating Association on the campus. Miss Hanson declared:

"I suggest you do everything in your power—first, to protest the release of Dr. Turner; second, to prevent similar dismissals of other faculty members, and third, to get rid of—once and for all—Chancellor John G. Bowman."

Referring to Dr. Bowman as a "man with a beautiful ideal—too beautiful to be realized at an urban university such as ours" the young blonde graduate asserted:

"If we aren't going to have our social and economic problems discussed in the classrooms, there is no use going to the university."

Miss Hanson attributed the firing of Turner after he had signed a contract to teach at Pitt next year to the desire of school authorities to avoid a general student uprising.

ALUMNI MEETING

A group of alumni, recently prominent on the campus, intend to meet tomorrow, she said, to draw up a protest petition which will be circulated among former students of Turner by a house-to-house canvass.

Miss Marguerite Swank, Pitt junior, and successor to Miss Hanson as head of the debating society, suggested spreading the petition among students registering at the school in the fall.

Turner was lauded by Richard Calhoun, former instructor in history at Pitt, who asserted:

"I have never known a man to approach his brilliance, his presentation, or his scholarship. He has been the greatest inspiration that students of the university have had in the past 10 years."

Guests at the meeting were members of the Traveling Seminar conducted by the Religion and Labor Foundation, a group of students and sociologists who are making a tour of industrial centers.

Scoring the clamping of the lid on the freedom of speech, particularly among members of the faculty of the university in their activities for social legislation, the Pen and Hammer Club, meeting in the Downtown Y. M. C. A. last night, demanded the reinstatement of Dr. Turner.

PLAN TO UPSET RELIEF VETO

Council probably will override Mayor McNair's veto of the ordinance to sell $500,000 direct relief bonds.

President Robert Garland announced today that he had called a special meeting of the recessed Council for 130 o'clock Monday afternoon. He said he believed there were enough votes to override the veto. Six are needed.

The bond sale had been passed unanimously in Council. It was designed to furnish aid in maternity cases, medical care and clothing to 6,000 families.

In vetoing the ordinance, Mayor McNair stated that he did so because relief has become a permanent matter in his opinion and should be paid for out of taxes and not out of bond funds.

M'NAIR ASKS FOR VOICE IN PWA

Will End Toll Fight If He May Select Authority Member

Mayor William N. McNair wants authority to select one of the three members of the Allegheny County Authority.

For the privilege, he says, he will withdraw his opposition to the imposition of tolls on the proposed tubes improvements. He said:

"If they give me one of those $10,0000 jobs, I'll go along. If they don't, I'll keep on opposing the tolls.

"And furthermore I'll file for President and run against Roosevelt in every state of the Union."

His attention was called to the fact that his statement appears he is fighting the President and not the County Commissioners, to which he replied:

"That's right."

His attention was also called to the fact that a Democrat is a member of the Authority. McNair replied:

"Yes, but not a 'McNair Democrat.'"

Minor Differences Delay PWA Contract

Differences on one or two minor points are holding up the signing of the contract between the Allegheny County Authority and the Public Works Administration giving the county a loan of $18,500,000 and a $6,000,000 grant, County Solicitor J. P. Fife said today.

Fife and Assistant County Solicitor Ralph H. Frank, returning from Washington last night, brought assurances, however, that the contracts would probably be signed some time next week. They have been in the capital negotiating the final phases of the loan.

REORGANIZE AUTHORITY

The Authority reorganized yesterday with E. N. Hunting, the new member, as vice chairman. Press C. Dowler was made chairman and William McK. Reed secretary-treasurer.

After locating their quarters in the County Office Building, they spent the day discussing, with the County Commissioners and county employes, their planned office set-up. An engineer in charge, attorneys, office equipment, clerical help and kindred subjects were discussed.

Reed explained that the Authority was trying to arrange a set-up so that when the money was ready they could proceed with plans for the work. He said he thought the Authority would sign first, then the government officials in Washington.

FIVE-CENT TOLL INDICATED

It was indicated that the contract may contain provision for a 5-cent toll the first year—as tolls apply to the tubes and bridges.

Such a toll was used as the base for estimates on revenue sufficient to make the projects self-liquidating, it was understood.

However, changes may be made necessary if the required revenues are not sufficient.

Edward L. Schmidt, county planning engineer, was with the attorneys in Washington.

HELEN JACOBS DEFEATED

WIMBLEDON, England, July 7.—(AP.)—Helen Hull Jacobs, twice a finalist, but never a winner of the most prized title in tennis, again was turned back today in her bid for the women's singles crown of the all-England championships by Dorothy Round, ranking English player, who defeated her 6-2, 5-7, 6-3 in the final round.

It was a heart-breaking setback for the American girl, who was finalist against her fellow Californian, Mrs. Helen Wils Moody, in both 1629 and 1932. The victory for Miss Round marked the first triumph for an Englishwoman since 1926 and made it an English sweep of the two main titles since 1909.

Elizabeth Ryan, former Californian now living in London, and Mme. Rene Mathieu, of France, won the women's doubles title for the second successive time, defeating Dorothy Andrus, of Stanford, Conn., and Mme. Jung Henrotin, of France, 6-3, 6-3, in the final round. It was the nineteenth Wimbledon doubles title for Miss Ryan.

Garage Gas Fatal To Woman Writer

ITHACA, N. Y., July 7.—(AP.)—Maude Radford Warren, author of children's and other books, died of carbon monoxide poisoning in her garage yesterday after leaving a note telling her maid she was starting to visit a doctor. She had been under treatment for heart disease. Dr. M. J. Foran, Coroner, investigating the death, said he had reached no decision.

Her husband, Prof. Joseph Parker Warren, whom she married in 1907, died two years later.

'Bugs' Baer Admiral Of Nebraska Navy

OMAHA, July 7.—(Universal.)—Arthur (Bugs) Baer, famous humorist, needs a flagship.

He was commissioned an admiral in the Nebraska navy, joining Amos 'n' Andy and other national notables in its honorary ranks.

The commission was forwarded to him in New York, where it was reported he was learning to row a boat.

FORMER KAISER GREAT GRANDPA

BERLIN, July 7.—(AP.)—Former Kaiser Wilhelm II, at the age of 75, has become a great-grandfather.

Announcement had been made today of the birth of a daughter to Prince Wilhelm, of Prussia, oldest son of the former crown prince, who broke the Hohenzollern tradition by marrying Dorothea von Salviata, a commoner, in June, 1933.

With rumors afloat at this critical time of possible attempts in the direction of restoring the monarchy, announcement of the birth brought new speculation to the question of succession within the Hohenzollern family.

By marrying the 25-year-old Nazi girl of "unequal birth," Prince Wilhelm, of Prussia, was declared deprived of his rights as an heir presumptive to the vacant throne.

CHANCELLOR LEAVES FOR 'VACATION' AS TROUBLE BREWS

BERLIN, July 7.—Despite a government statement that executions ended a week ago, International News Service learned today from an authoritative source that killings continued all week, at least until last night.

Today the government finally resolved to issue a death list—of 46 names—which will be made public Monday.

Government circles, however, admit privately that at least 170 persons were killed in the "purging" process and that 200 would be a reasonable estimate.

Nazi Murders Protested by Vatican

International News Service.

VATICAN CITY, July 7.—The Vatican took energetic action today in protesting against the reported murder of Father Emil Muhler by German Nazis and against the denial of the last sacrament to other victims of the Hitler "counter-revolution" of a week ago.

The ecclesiastical authorities at Munich were instructed to deliver the protest to the Hitler government.

Cardinal Faulhaber, at Munich, is reported to be particularly incensed at the cynical explanation received from Nazi officials that Catholics, slain at Hitler's orders, were denied the sacrament "because the guilty party was unworthy."

It is understood that the Vatican is collecting evidence of the execution of Catholics in Germany with the intention of issuing a white book for publication throughout the world.

BERLIN, July 7.—A call to all Christendom to unite in defense against Nazi terrorism has been issued by an unidentified spokesman for the Vatican, it was learned here today when copies of the Hungarian newspaper, Pester Loyd, were received, containing an excoriating interview given by a Vatican representative to the Action Catholics. The spokesman said:

"This is no longer a Catholic matter, but an affair for the whole world."

Roehm Aides Band for Revenge

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

BERLIN, July 7.—(AP.)—Sinister reports spread today that friends of the "immoral traitor," Ernst Roehm, were plotting to avenge his execution. The guard in Berlin has been strengthened and vigilance by government agencies intensified.

It was understood that Storm Troopers in civilian clothes held a secret meeting last night calling for "revenge," despite an order a week ago that Storm Troopers refrain from gathering together for any purpose.

Chancellor Hitler left Berlin last night for his summer home in the Bavarian Alps to spend the week-end and possibly a longer vacation there.

CABINET MEETINGS

It was announced today at the Chancellor's office no further cabinet meetings were planned during July.

Hitler left exactly one week after he had flown to Munich and begun his grim "purging" of Storm Troop ranks with firing squads.

Guards have been redoubled in Berlin following reports that friends of Roehm, Storm Troop chief of staff, who was executed

REICH CRIPPLED BY REVOLT

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER
International News Service.

BERLIN, July 7.—One week has elapsed since the first shots were fired in Germany's bloodiest week since 1919 and today this country is still in the grip of terror so widespread and so profound that business is lamed and virtually no trade is going on except the purchase of the essentials of life.

Germany has gone through four stages of psychological reaction to its blood bath. When the first news came of the killings of Gen. Kurt von Schleicher and his wife and seven Storm Troop leaders, the country was numb with astonishment. The second reaction came with the news that Capt. Ernst Roehm, commander of the Storm Troops, had been killed.

ROEHM NOT MOURNED

The country as a whole sighed with relief at the death of a man who as head of the Storm Troops had been chiefly responsible for the terror that preceded the burning of the Reichstag.

Official communiques that Roehm and von Schleicher had

Schenley Oval 'Nudity' To Be Connecil Issue

From Mayor McNair down, city officials today found themselves confronted with this burning issue:

"Is Schenley Oval to be more or less of a nudists' paradise?"

In Morals Court three boys, under 21, were arraigned because they had adorned the oval in nothing but trunks. Magistrate J. W. McGowan discharged them.

When the boys were warned not to be so careless with their attire, their lawyers announced they planned to go before Council with the issue.

And Attorney Harold Lavine added he had already consulted Mayor McNair, also Public Safety Director A. Marshall Bell, who he said could see nothing indecent in the spectacle.

Inspector Harry Moore, of Oakland, stormed against the practice. He said it was indecent and would impair morals.

Attorney Emanuel Schifano offered to take off his shirt in court and swear in women witnesses to decide whether this constituted indecency. The offer was turned down.

Attorney Lavine contended that the sun's rays did the boys a lot of good but Moore retorted they could go elsewhere for the rays.

The young men of the shirtless army were Frank Raget, Bigelow street; Isadore Friedlander and Edward Siegel, Dawson street.

Junior Birdmen Model Derby Postponed

Hard luck for the youngsters—but heat relief for the district—was contained in the announcement that the Junior Birdmen's Model Plane Derby at South Park today had been postponed by threatening showers.

Accordingly, the meet will be held tomorrow. The starting time will be 1 p. m.

Fair weather was predicted, indicating that the young plane builders will have an unequaled chance to show their prowess.

Thousands are expected at the plane derby, the first in this district for several years. Buses will take hundreds from the Brentwood car loop to the athletic field at South Park for a special fare of 20 cents for the round trip. Other thousands will motor to the park, where ample parking space is available.

Last-minute entries brought the list to 30 youngsters, competing in three types of gliders and planes. Efforts will be made to break the previous record, made several years ago, in which a plane remained aloft for five minutes and two seconds.

The winner will compete with plane builders in 17 other Birdmen wing cities for the William Randolph Hearst trophy and a scholarship or a trip to Europe.

HITLER LEAVES BERLIN AS ROEHM REVENGE MOVE GROWS

STORM TROOPS HOLD SECRET MEETING

Capital Doubles Guard As Rumors of Plot Spread

last Saturday, were plotting for revenge.

It becomes more and more apparent that the Storm Troopers are not going to be dissolved, as had been indicated immediately after Chancellor Hitler crushed the plot against his authority, which Roehm and others had hatched. The troopers are now on a month's vacation.

The Nazis issued a carefully phrased statement last night saying that the Storm Troops and the Nazi party belong to each other and cannot be separated. The statement was made by Rudolf Hess, minister without portfolio, and was directed toward reassuring both troopers and the general public that no drastic action was contemplated. The statement said:

"The work of one would be senseless without the other."

PROUD TROOPS

Hitler's newspaper, Voelischer Beobachter, proclaimed:

"The Storm Troops are proudly carrying on, and remain loyal to Der Fuehrer (Hitler). Even in civilian clothes its members can easily be recognized."

Although Commander Herzog, of the Storm Troopers in Silesia, where Catholics are uneasy, indicated the troopers would return from their leave to full strength, Hess and Victor Lutze, new chief of staff, sidestepped the point.

It was generally believed the personnel may be cut to as little as 20 per cent of the present strength and that hard physical, mental and moral tests will be used to weed out a large percentage of the stormers.

This belief has grown among Berlin stormers, causing increasing discontent.

Hess' reassurances that "the party still has in the Storm Troops the same organization as before" were interpreted as the start of a campaign to quiet grumblings.

Another placating force today was the release from police custody of three members of the staff of Vice Chancellor Franz von Papen with the announcement they were not connected with plots against the regime.

REPORTED KILLED

One of the three, Fritz Gunther von Tschirsky, von Papen's adjutant, had been reported killed. The others were Friedrich Karl von Savigny, a secretary, and Margarate von Stotzingen, of the office force.

Von Papen's political future remains uncertain.

Leaders were excited by the revelation that Hitler was nearly assassinated when he inaugurated his "purging" campaign last Saturday. A reliable source there said Edmund Heines, Breslau police chief, brandished a revolver at the Chancellor before he was shot down by one of Hitler's aides.

Hess, in an interview, said:

"The Nazi party now has the same great respect for the Storm Troops as before.

"Every National Socialist knows what the Brown Army has undertaken and achieved in the time of struggle."

Lutze said there was nothing definite on the projected Storm Troop reorganization except that such a course would be necessary. He declared:

"The Storm Troop ought not be ashamed because of a small circle of erstwhile leaders and traitors. Hitler stands true to it and loves it."

The Nazi Press Department promised that a full statement from Hitler on the rebellion would be issued within a few days. He has maintained an official silence since the stirring events of the last week-end.

MONEY TRANSFER

(Dispatches from Rome said no confirmation was available of reports from London that Hitler had transferred personal funds to Italian banks).

A known total of 21 killed during the "liquidation" of traitors was reported from Munich. They included Karl Stuetzel, former Minister of the Interior of Bavaria, who was turned out of office by the Nazis, and former Lieut. Richard Scheringer, well-known figure in the early days of the Nazis, who turned Communist.

Approval of Hitler's grim "liquidation" was voted by leaders of two religious organizations—the Protestant Church of Thuringia and the "Neo-Heathen" Germanic Faith Movement.

A declaration of the Supreme Evangelical Church council of Thuringia said:

"With hearts full of faith we sense behind these events the benevolent hand of Almighty God. To Him we owe praise and thanks that He sent us Der Fuehrer, who with a strong hand guides the ship of state."

Germany Crippled by Nazi Revolt

been engaged in a conspiracy to overcome the government were implicitly believed.

This feeling of public approval of Chancellor Adolf Hitler's action was increased by the cleverly disseminated version that if Roehm had succeeded he would have murdered all other members of the cabinet except Hitler, then force Hitler to be the nominal head of a government of Storm Troopers.

Once in full power the Storm Troopers, so it is related, they would have staged a frightful reign of terror, killing unrestrainedly for a week or so. They would have killed all rich men, all Jews, and then would have installed a national Bolshevik form of government.

APPLAUSE FOR HITLER

Before such a horrible prospect the public recoiled and applauded Hitler for preventing it. Among the people as a whole Hitler was more popular than ever. By Wednesday, however, the public already had learned by word of mouth that the killings had gone much further than the official communiques admitted. It was learned that not only the brutal and hated Storm Troops leader and the not very popular von Schleicher had been killed, but that also an unknown but disturbingly large number of others had perished or disappeared.

Among these others were men of such character and interests that they could not possibly have made a pact with Roehm. There were, for example, men from such widely different camps as Dr. Erich Klausener, the Catholic leader, and Gen. von Lossow, one-time commander of the Bavarian Reichswehr, who put down Hitler's 1923 putsch and members of the famous Herren Club of Junkers.

These three examples alone, representing Catholic interests, Bavarian Separatists interests and Junker interests, proved to the public that the terror had extended to all classes and the Roehm revolt had been used as an opportunity to get rid of every individual who seemed likely ever to become the center of opposition.

PUBLIC REACTION

Thereupon ensued the fourth stage of German popular reaction. Skepticism began to be expressed of the authenticity of the government statesmen. It began to be doubted whether Roehm and von Schleicher had conspired. It began even to be doubted whether any conspiracy at all had existed.

To neutral observers it is incredible that the killings could have been started in cold blood, without any excuse save the desire to get rid of potential enemies. Certainly it must be assumed Hitler personally was convinced of the necessity of his action.

But because the government has issued no list of dead and has given no details of the plot, public skepticism, anxiety and dread has now reached large proportions.

Above all, not only is the public frightened, but the Nazi party itself is even more so. Hitler's greatest loss as a consequence of this week's events is the collapse of that most valuable fiction—the belief that the Nazi party was united. Upon that fiction was built the second illusion—that the German people were united.

Today it is obvious that internecine hatred in Germany has been multiplied a thousandfold and that class interests which have been unofficially bridged by the Nazi uniform, have flamed up in fiercer form.

GOERING'S STRENGTH

From the point of view of personalities Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, who carried out the executions in Northern Germany, has become the strongest man in the country next to Hitler. Dr. Joseph Paul Goebbels, whom Hitler took with him on his punitive expedition against Roehm, appears, nevertheless, to have receded in influence, while Himmler, leader of the black Hitler guards and the prime instrument of terror, has assumed greater importance.

But it is false to speak of a triumvirate. Hitler, despite damage to his popularity, probably still retains enough of his mystic hold on his 200,000 bodyguards and upon the police to treat any member of the so-called triumvirate as he treated Roehm.

Hitler is still Mohammed, slightly scarred, but still the prophet of Nazi Germany.

The real test of Hitler's power, leaving aside for the moment the demise of President von Hindenburg, will come when the disbanded Storm Troopers are reorganized. Hundreds of thousands, if not a million or more, probably will not be taken back into service. What they will do is only one of a host of problems facing the man who has just finished destroying friends who lifted him into power.

'BRAIN TRUST' MORITZ FIGHTS FOR PAY

McNair's 'Three-Job' Aide Praises Finley, But Wants Post

BULLETIN.

A temporary restraining order was granted today by Judge Samuel H. Gardner against Mayor McNair and Theodore L. Moritz, enjoining them from interfering with the duties of Charles A. Finley, chairman of the Traction Conference Board.

Secretary - Magistrate - Traction Board Chairman Theodore L. Moritz has announced that he will demand full salary for the Traction Board job from the Pittsburgh Railways Company, at least until July 23, when Council reconvenes.

Meanwhile Charles A. Finley continues to occupy the office and has refused to recognize any legality in the Moritz appointment.

When Moritz walked in yesterday afternoon to take over the office, after Mayor McNair had gone over with him and sworn him in to the $12,000-a-year job, Finley refused to be ousted.

Asked if there was any "rough stuff" after the refusal, Moritz said:

"Oh-h-h-h no-o-o-o. Finley was a perfect gentleman."

He explained that Chairman Finley had suggested that the difference be settled in court and that he had agreed.

What court or what sort of legal action is contemplated, Moritz, who is also an attorney, did not explain.

Finley has refused to recognize that anything has happened. Since the Traction Conference Board agreement provides that no Traction Board member can be removed without a majority vote of Council, his friends argue that there is no vacancy to which an appointment can be made.

Council has refused six times to remove Finley for candidates named by the Mayor.

Mayor McNair made good his boast and installed some one in place of Finley, but has admitted it is only a "recess appointment," good until Council comes back from vacation.

Moritz has announced that he will make another attempt to seat himself in the Traction Board offices Monday. At present he is visiting a brother in Alicia, Fayette County, Pa.

He has announced big plans for the railways system, including the elimination of all the subsidiary companies.

BANK TO OPEN ON NORTH SIDE

The North Side Deposit Bank of Pittsburgh will open for business Monday at the quarters formerly occupied by the closed Real Estate Savings and Trust Company at 516 Federal street, according to an announcement by the State Banking Department.

Simultaneously, Walter C. Brenneis, receiver for the Real Estate Savings and Trust Company, announced that the first checks for a dividend of 59 per cent to depositors had been mailed out today. This distribution was made possible through liquidation of assets and a loan of $1,500,000 from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The North Side Deposit Bank of Pittsburgh has a capital of $200,000, surplus of $100,000 and undivided profits of $12,000.

Officers of the new bank are A. V. Purnell, president; Edward A. Young, vice president; Raymond G. Geltz, treasurer, and Stanley Crowe, secretary.

MAP SELF RULE FOR INDUSTRY AFTER NRA

Johnson Arranging System to Replace Present Setup

NEW YORK, July 7.—(AP.)—A plan to replace the NRA with self-government for industry, an authoritative source said today, is being formulated by President Roosevelt's administration.

Under the proposed plan, codes would become a permanent feature of industry, which would govern itself under the close supervision of the federal government.

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, has taken the lead in the reformation, the Associated Press informant disclosed, and has been in New York for several days conferring on the change.

UP TO PRESIDENT

Steps toward completion of the new project were initiated by Johnson several weeks ago in a preliminary set-up submitted to President Roosevelt. Suggested revisions are being made for final approval by the President.

Although there was no immediate confirmation by the government, the source of the information—one close to the administration—said carrying out of the program is virtually assured.

Washington observers said the plan followed closely the known beliefs of Gen. Johnson that coordination of the NRA and the Federal Trade Commission was necessary.

GUARD AGAINST MONOPOLY

Government experts have been working for months on plans to make permanent the fundamentals of the NRA and other business laws, but it was believed in Washington that a final permanent organization probably will await more experience in the conduct of the NRA as an administrative agency.

Special care has been taken by Johnson, it was said in New York, to avoid under the new organization the monopolistic tendencies charged against the NRA.

NORTH SIDERS FIGHT SITE

With the incinerator measures made law by Mayor McNair's signature, residents of the North Side are reported ready to continue the battle against a plant at Chateau and Reedsdale streets by seeking an injunction from the court.

A committee of Manchester residents is to meet Monday to determine what action will be taken.

The Mayor, after signing the incinerator bills, said:

"I was afraid that if I vetoed them, Council would give up the entire incinerator program."

Councilman Charles Anderson, leader of the fight for incinerators, was one of the first to congratulate the Mayor on his decision. The city will be ready to advertise for bids on the North Side and Brilliant pumping station incinerators by Thursday.

ROME PROTESTS NAZI KILLINGS

ferred specifically to the killing of Erich Klausner, Berlin Catholic leader, last Saturday; the shooting of Hubert von Bose, adjutant to Vice Chancellor van Papen, and to the reported slaying of Father Emil Muhler. He said:

"We find no words to express our indignation and pain at the fact that Catholic leaders were slain in Germany in the same way as pathological, perverted insurrectionists.

"The Vatican does not stand alone on the defensive. Allied with us are all who affirm Christ, whether they look to Rome or not. This front of many hundreds millions will not be broken by any modern Nero."

Copies of the newspaper containing the interview were being passed from hand to hand by Catholics today, despite efforts of the Ministry of Propaganda to exclude foreign newspapers.

Hotel Roosevelt Gets New Manager

R. K. Christenberry, of Peoria, Ill., arrived in Pittsburgh today to take over the management of the Hotel Roosevelt, succeeding Francis W. Parke.

Mr. Christenberry was formerly manager of the Jefferson Hotel in Peoria, and has been engaged in the hotel business 15 years. He was accompanied to Pittsburgh by M. W. Phillips, his assistant at Peoria.

NEW YORK, July 7.—(INS.)—Francis Ormond French, father of the newlywed, Mrs. Ellen French Astor, has turned aviation manager.

French is managing Laura Ingalls, American aviatrix, in her proposed participation in the London-Australia international air race next October. A first prize of $50,000 has been offered.

He will sail for Europe with his wife in a week or so to take care of preliminary arrangements. French would neither affirm nor deny today the report that John Jacob Astor, III, his new son-in-law, has contributed to the fund. Two-thirds of the $15,000 required has been raised.

French who is 46, was divorced by his first wife, the former Eleanor Livingston Burrill, after he took to driving a New York taxicab when he lost his money in Wall street.

VIENNA TO FREE PODERJAY

International News Service.

VIENNA, July 7.—Capt. Ivan Poderjay, dashing Jugo-Slavian officer who has been under arrest here for several weeks in connection with the disappearance of Miss Agnes Tufverson, New York woman lawyer, whom he married, will be released within the next few days, the Vienna police announced today.

Poderjay's woman companion, Mme. Suzanne Ferrand, whom he married in London before his admittedly bigamous marriage to Miss Tufverson, will also be set at liberty.

The police announced they were forced to make this decision because American authorities had taken no interest in the case and had made no move for the extradition of Poderjay and Mme. Ferrand.

Deny Man Stabbed In Braddock Cafe

The management of the Rome Cafe, Fleet street, North Braddock, today denied that the fight in which Joseph McDonough, of Bell street, Rankin, was injured occurred in or near the cafe. It had been reported yesterday that the fight had occurred in a Fleet street cafe. McDonough was stabbed.

PORTO RICO PLAN STUDIED BY ROOSEVELT

President Meets Group At San Juan; Next Goal Virgin Isles

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, July 7.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt pursued his vacation cruise energetically today, rising early for a tour of San Juan after a night of conferences on a new plan for the rehabilitation of Porto Rico.

After a first-hand inspection of the capital, the President was scheduled to board the cruiser Houston for the Virgin Islands.

The presidential party will land at St. Thomas, on the island of that name, and the capital, where he will spend the night. Tomorrow he will visit St. Croix, the other principal island of the group purchased from Denmark by the United States in 1917.

Two hundred Porto Rican leaders discussed with President Roosevelt last night the economic and social rehabilitation plan drawn up by island economists and Rexford G. Tugwell, Under-Secretary of Agriculture.

Despite a 10-hour automobile ride over rain-swept mountain roads yesterday in crossing the island from Mayaguez, Mr. Roosevelt said he was not tired. He spent the night at the government mansion as the guest of Gov. Blanton Winship.

A cheering throng welcomed the President to San Juan.

CITY MAY MAKE OWN CONCRETE

With a second set of identical bids received from companies making concrete, Supplies Director W. R. Dunlap is checking up on the possibility of the city manufacturing its own.

Director Dunlap recently refused bids from eight companies which quoted the same prices on various grades of concrete. He readvertised, and, while he got lower bids, he found that they were all the same except for a discount for prompt payment which had been taken into account in the new tabulation.

Representatives of the companies assert their prices are regulated by NRA codes. Director Dunlap has insisted that the rules of competitive bidding be followed.

MELLON VICTOR IN GULF SUIT

PHILADELPHIA, July 7.—(AP.)—William L. Mellon, Pittsburgh capitalist, had emerged victor again today in the suit brought against him and five other Gulf Refining Company directors by Albert R. Knight, who charged them with defrauding the government of $3,629,196 in income taxes.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals yesterday unanimously upheld the decision of Judge Robert M. Gibson, of the Federal District Court at Pittsburgh. Last October Judge Gibson threw out Knight's suit on the ground that he had no right to institute such an action for the government without the consent of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Knight sued in behalf of the government and in his own name to recover for himself a similar amount for "giving the information."

Besides Mellon, a brother of the former secretary of the Treasury, these were named defendants: Gale R. Nutty, H. L. Stone, George S. Davison, F. A. Leovy and W. J. Guthrie.

Mrs. Roosevelt Ends Southern Trip in Ky.

BEREA, Ky., July 7.—(AP.)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and two companions arrived here last night shortly before 8 o'clock, after an all-day motor trip from Norris, Tenn.

They registered at Boone Tavern for the night, and were guests for dinner at the home of President W. J. Hutchins, of Berea College. Mrs. Roosevelt is accompanied by Miss Marion Bickerman and Miss Nancy Cook, of Hyde Park, N. Y.

HOTEL CHAIN HEAD SETS UP OFFICE HERE

Establish Western Headquarters at Pittsburgher

James E. Knott, vice president of the Knott Hotel Corporation, today had established headquarters in the Hotel Pittsburgher, from where western units of the Knott chain hereafter will be directed.

Mr. Knott announced no immediate appointment will be made for the vacancy created by the resignation of Gerald P. O'Neill as general director of Knott interests in Pittsburgh. The Knott interests to be directed from here, besides the Pittsburgher, include the Hotel Keystone and three restaurants in Pittsburgh and the Hotel Allerton, Cleveland.

Mr. O'Neill has been appointed general director of the Hotel William Penn and Fort Pitt Hotel for the Pittsburgh Hotels Company, receivers. The Eppley Hotel Company operating contract expires July 30.

Sculptor Flays Toll Plan at Liberty Tubes

Frank Vittor, sculptor and member of the City Art Commission, told the Henry George Club yesterday that a proposed toll ramp at the south end of the Liberty tubes is unnecessary and a "black eye" to the city. He suggested appropriation of an additional sum for a "toll plaza" at the site, adding:

"No one knows what the plaza is going to look like, but you can place a guess that it will be unartistic and unsightly."

'Political' Red Neckties Under Ban in Vienna

VIENNA, July 7.—(AP.)—A red necktie, worn with "political intent," may subject the wearer to punishment, it was warned today by the Ministry of Education.

The ministry issued an order against political demonstrations by students in the vacation period. Even an unfortunate choice of articles of clothing is forbidden.

Nazi children have worn brown stockings and those favoring Socialist doctrines have worn red neckties. Both are proscribed by the Ministry of Education. Even an acquittal on a charge of political demonstration by a court will not preclude punishment later by school authorities, it is warned.

The order applies to foreign children as well as Austrians.

Ickes Sets Up Patrol To Keep Drones Busy

WASHINGTON, July 7.—(AP.)—A patrol was set over the Department of Interior today to make sure that the government workers heed the warning of Secretary Ickes against loafing.

Ickes gave 4,000 Public Works and Interior Department employes three-quarters of an hour off yesterday to deliver an impromptu lecture against wasting the government's time. He said:

"I always have had an aversion to gentlemen—and this applies to ladies also—sitting with their feet on desks.

"I know that some, in defense of the proclivity, say they can think better, but I wonder what they are thinking with."

Eating breakfast, primping and holding social gatherings during office hours, and rushing madly into the corridors at the 3:30 p. m. closing time all came in for his censure.

He said he had called the workers together because he thought "contact of the drones with busy bees might have a salutary effect on the drones."

And to see that it did, he said he had ordered a thorough patrol of the building by Louis R. Glavis, Interior Department chief investigator, and "his merry men."

HUNDREDS VOLUNTEER TO BE PARALYSIS 'TEST TUBES'

OFFER TO RISK LIVES IN SERUM EXPERIMENTS

Temple Doctor Tries Vaccine on Apes; Humans Next

PHILADELPHIA, July 7.—(AP.)—Science's war against infantile paralysis has enrolled hundreds of volunteers as living "test tubes" for experiments with anti-paralysis serum.

Ready to sacrifice their lives if need be in the search for a cure for the disease, the volunteers have come from all parts of the country to Dr. John A. Kolmer, bacteriologist head of Temple University's medical staff, with offers to try out a vaccine he has produced. Dr. Kolmer declared:

"Hundreds of persons have offered themselves, but no actual inoculation will be made until my paper describing the serum has been submitted to the American Medical Association.

"Then we will decide just which volunteers will be chosen."

The Temple immunologist's anti-toxin, developed through years of research, has undergone a long series of successful tests with monkeys as subjects and now is ready for the final stage of experiment—human beings.

His experiments, disclosed a few months ago, were similar, he says, to those employed by Dr. William H. Park, Dr. Josephine Neel and Dr. Henry Wirt, New York bacteriologists, who this week inoculated themselves to test a serum they developed.

CONVICTS GAIN WEIGHT

CANON CITY, Colo., July 7.—(AP.)—Two Colorado convicts were confident today they had won a wager with death in a series of tests to determine the value of a new serum its discoverers hope will prevent tuberculosis.

The convicts, Charles Dickson and Mike Schmidt, said they have gained weight and are in good health, although they have taken several doses of the serum and live tuberculosis bacilli have been injected into their blood.

ROCKEFELLER 95 TOMORROW, IN SECLUSION

Quiet Drive, Simple Game to Be Only Recreations

LAKEWOOD, N. J., July 7.—(AP.)—John D. Rockefeller, Sr., will be 95 years old tomorrow, but to the aged philanthropist it will be just another day, a day of activity carefully curtailed, a day of diet strictly regulated.

Members of his family will be there, and the man who was once hailed as "the richest man in the world" may have a short drive over the estate with them, or perhaps there will be instead a game of "numerica," Mr. Rockefeller's simple number game played with cards.

No celebration has been planned. The famous "birthday statement" will not be issued.

GIVES UP CHURCH

Since his return to the Lakewood estate in May, after his longest winter stay at his Ormond Beach (Fla.) home, Mr. Rockefeller has discontinued even his customary Sunday church-going and his much-loved golfing over the nine-hole private course on his estate here.

Few visitors have been allowed through the closely guarded gates, and those who have were personally approved by the former oil magnate.

A few short automobile rides form his only recreation. His mail, in the past extremely heavy when he was in residence here, has dwindled to an almost negligible amount.

Mr. Rockefeller this year remained at "The Casement"—his Florida home—10 days longer than ever before. It was his fifteenth winter there, and, when reminded of that by a friend, he smiled and said he hoped there would be 15 more.

SIMPLE ROUTINE

Since his illness during the winter his daily routine has been a model of simplicity. It is the routine he will follow tomorrow.

He rises at 7 a. m. and has his breakfast an hour later. After breakfast, if he feels able, he scans his personal mail and has his secretary read aloud the current news.

Luncheon is at 1:30 and is a leisurely meal. At 3 o'clock he is motored about the estate and then has a nap before dinner at 7:30. At 10 o'clock he retires.

His own words explain his attitude toward his strictly regimented existence:

"I am grateful every day for the contentment I enjoy in living a quiet and simple life."

ALEC FRANCIS, POLLARD DIE IN HOLLYWOOD

Noted Pioneer Movie Actor Succumbs After Operation

HOLLYWOOD, July 7.—(AP.)—Death thinned the ranks of filmdom's old-time personalities by two today.

Alec B. Francis, a distinguished character actor, succumbed to an old internal ailment after an emergency operation. He was 66.

A few hours after Francis' death, Harry Pollard, 55-year-old director, died of a heart attack after an illness of six weeks.

Francis' screen career dated back to the days of one-reelers and the nickelodeons and almost up until the time of his death he held his place as one of the screen's leading character actors.

Pollard directed "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "Show Boat," the first of "The Cohens and Kelly" series and the famous "Leather Pusher" series.

MISS DRESSLER FIGHTS DEATH

Universal Service.

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., July 7.—Marie Dressler's condition was unchanged today and she rested quietly as she continued her valiant fight against the death from a complication of diseases attending physicians say is but a matter of time.

Flowers, letters and telegrams continued to pour into the estate near here of friends, where the 62-year-old star went after increasing ill health forced her retirment two months ago from screen work.

U. S. GOBS FIGHT FOR BEAUTIES

NICE, France, July 7.—(AP.)—It was the "day after" for more than 200 sailors from the United States battleships Arkansas and Wyoming today, following a riotous evening ashore.

Nice beauties, said by police to have been a cause of the trouble, are now safe, for the prefect requested naval officers not to let the sailors return.

Scenes reminiscent of the Armistice were recalled last night when the sailors and the citizens mixed in brawls in various cafes.

Twenty-eight gobs were injured, one seriously. Damage estimated at 25,000 francs (about $1,625) was done.

The reveling and pugnacious tars were finally quelled by a naval riot squad just before dawn and packed back to their ships to be dealt with by their officers.

Longshoremen vs. The Police

Stirring scenes near the docks at San Francisco, now patrolled by National Guardsmen, as police battled rioting longshoremen, strikers for two months now, as operators made an effort to move cargoes from the long idle wharves.

Strategy Committee Named to Rule on General Walkout

SAN FRANCISCO, July 7.—(AP.)—A "brains, not brawn," leadership took over direction for the day of union labor's fight in behalf of striking longshoremen.

As steel-helmeted riflemen of the States Militia patrolled the waterfront, scene of tumult, riot, death and injury in recent days, delegates from 120 unions—representing 43,800 members—voted last night to leave the matter of a general strike in the hands of a "strike strategy committee," John O'Connell, labor leader, said:

"This strategy committee is the same move now. It will lead to organized movement in case of a general strike later and would mean that brains and not brawn would direct us."

BAYONET THREAT

With the waterfront district quiet momentarily under the threat of bayonets and bullets for those who riot, President Roosevelt's labor disputes board prepared for public hearings Monday to determine issues, facts and practices in the strike which began May 9 when 12,000 longshoremen struck. The longshoremen have been joined since by some 15,000 allied maritime workers.

By a vote of 165 to 8, representatives of the 120 unions voted at a closed meeting last night to support the strategy committee plan after a thundering chorus of "ayes" had adopted a strongly worded resolution of condemnation for use of troops on the waterfront.

While moves for peace were made and talk of more strife was heard, San Francisco hospitals and homes held the scarred victims of Thursday's rioting, in which two were killed, 34 shot and scores gassed and bruised in violent fighting between police and pickets.

"VICTORY OR DEATH"

Victory or death was the cry of embattled maritime workers at Portland, where a general strike also has been proposed, as they resisted an attempt to move cargo. Strike pickets, who defied a blinding blast from police tear gas guns to grease railroad tracks leading to the docks, shouted:

"If we let you move this train to the dock, our cause is lost. We're ready to give our lives to prevent it."

In view of predictions by Chief of Police William J. Quinn and others that the arrival of the National Guards in San Francisco might cause further bloodshed, the sudden and complete calm on the waterfront seemed almost to hold an ominous note. Not even a leer or motion of disrespect was made toward the youthful soldiers crouching silently behind their machine guns or walking guard posts with bayonets fixed.

Delegates of the various trades unions in the city meet tonight with the joint marine strike committee to consider the general walkout proposal. Teamsters of San Francisco and Oakland have called meetings for tomorrow to consider their future policies.

BLAZE WRECKS POWER PLANT

SOMERSET, Pa., July 7.—(AP.)—Fire of undetermined origin destroyed a two-story plant of the Associated Gas and Electric Company at Rockwood, eight miles from Somerset, early today.

The plant was built several years ago. Together with equipment it was valued at more than $1,000,000, officials said. The plant was used to supplement the company's other power plants.

Hal Miller, of Rockwood, a switchman, was alone in the plant. He discovered flames on the second floor.

Insufficient supplies of gasoline delayed the Rockwood firemen in reaching the scene. Lack of electric current due to the fire crippled gasoline pumps in the town.

Weather Conditions

Showers were general over the lake region, Ohio and Indiana and southward over the Gulf states during the last 24 hours, and it is still cloudy over that section and raining in Ohio this morning. The rainy conditions was caused by the low pressure area that was centered over Wisconsin yesterday morning and which is now centered over the St. Lawrence Valley. There is still a trough, formed by low pressure extending from the St. Lawrence Valley southwestward to a center over the Lower Mississippi Valley. High pressure covers the lake region and the Upper Mississippi Valley, attended by much cooler weather than yesterday morning. Another low appears over Alberta and extends down over the Rocky Mountain section. There were no high maximum temperatures yesterday except in the Upper Ohio Valley and southward where 90 degrees or slightly higher occurred.

River Conditions

The rivers are stationary at low stages. Stage at Franklin is zero. Lock No. 4 (Mon. 10.2). Pittsburgh, 9.0. Dam No. 4, 8.7. No. 6, 8.5. No. 10, 9.5, and No. 12, 9.6. The dams are up.

CHILD DROWNS IN PARK CREEK

The body of Lorraine Mularski, 16-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Mularski, of 238 Forty-third street, was found late yesterday in Montour Creek in the Montour Valley Park, North Fayette Township, 10 minutes after she wandered from her parents' camp, the Coroner's office reported.

The child was found drowned in two feet of water by her uncle, Richard Olszewski, 12, of 917 Herschel street, Elliott, one of the searching party. She was hurried to the office of Dr. J. W. Burkett, of Moon Run, who applied artificial respiration for two hours in an effort to revive her.

Mrs. Charlotte Mularski, mother of the child, who was preparing the evening meal at her sister's store in the park when the baby wandered away, said:

"Lorraine always liked to play in water. We thought she was playing with some of the older children, but when we learned she vanished every person in the park began searching for her."

THREE IN AUTO ELECTROCUTED

LANCASTER, Pa., July 7.—(AP.)—High tension electric wires, torn from a pole hit by an automobile, electrocuted three Manheim residents and burned their bodies in the car shortly before midnight.

The shock of the 4,400-volt power lines hurled one of the victims, Mrs. Clarence Grissinger, from the machine and cut off her arm.

Her husband and Phares Fink, owner of the automobile, were killed by the same charge. The high voltage set the auto afire.

The three were returning from a swimming party on the Lancaster-Lebanon pike. Their car hit the pole, the impact tearing the wires from place.

Find Injured Man In North Side Park

Charles Papinchak, 21, of 3123 McClure avenue, found semi-conscious late yesterday in Riverview Park, was taken to St. John's Hospital, where it was reported he was suffering from abdominal injuries. Police said he told them that he had been struck by an automobile and crawled into the park.

Divorce Refused Man Who Gave Wife Liquor

The suit of Clarence E. Ryan, former bootlegger, for a divorce from Irene A. Ryan, has ended in a rebuke from the court for his own misconduct.

Judge Elder W. Marshall not only refused his plea, but also ordered Ryan to pay $300 counsel fees to Mrs. Ryan's attorney, Louis Little. He remarked:

"A husband who introduces his wife to the use of liquor so that she becomes an habitual drunkard cannot be heard to complain of her habits and conduct."

Reviewing testimony of parties at the Ryan residence, the court found that:

"The type of people who visited the home was the lowest. Men came without their wives, and wives without their husbands."

"This mode of living had its effect on Mrs. Ryan. She quarreled and used abusive language."

The defendant testified before Judge Marshall in January that her husband threw her across a room, causing her to break her arm against a piano, after she had turned a hose on three chorus girls seated in her husband's car in front of their home.

CIRCUS DRAWS HUGE CROWDS

Two big crowds were expected to gather at Point Breeze this afternoon and tonight for the final performances of Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey Circus. The performances today will conclude a three-day stand in Pittsburgh of the "greatest show on earth."

Few of the thousands of circus-loving folk in Pittsburgh will have missed this edition of the show under the "big top" if yesterday's throngs which witnessed both performances can be taken as an indication. All streets for several blocks in the vicinity of Point Breeze were lined with automobiles, while hundreds came by trolley.

Nudist Nuptials in News Of Ben Franklin's Day

FREDERICK, Md., July 7.—(AP.)—On the word of the late Benjamin Franklin, there is nothing new in nudist weddings.

Franklin's newspaper, the Pennsylvania Gazette, chronicled a nudist wedding in Maryland on January 4, 1752.

"A Naked Truth," the Gazette said in headlines. The story said:

"About a fortnight ago there happened in Frederick County as comical a wedding as we remember to have heard of. A couple, with their guests (having obtained a license) came to the house of a reverend clergyman late in the evening, after he had been some time in bed, and desired to be married.

"He, willing to oblige them, got up and dressed himself in order to perform the ceremony; but the bridegroom, having imbibed a notion that if he married a woman with any thing, he should be obliged to pay all her debts; and as she came from the province of New Jersey, he was doubtful about her circumstances.

"The obliging bride, to remove all incumbrances, stripped and two women held a sheet between her and the clergyman, while he performed his office; and she, having forgot her cap at undressing, it came to her mind in the midst of the ceremony, and she pulled that off too and flung it on the bed, and was married to her spouse (if not in a wedding suit, in her birthday suit).

"After the ceremony, the bridegroom put on her one of his own shirts to cover her."

LAKE ERIE WAVE TRAPS BATHERS

ERIE, Pa., July 7.—(AP.)—Heroic efforts by a trio of life guards averted several drownings as a huge wave from Lake Erie swept over a bathing beach at the Peninsula State Park last night.

Scores of bathers resting on the sand were suddenly immersed. Picnic lunches, clothing and beach conveniences were washed away.

The lifeguards, Donald C. Donovan, captain; William Rollinger and Robert Hirschfeld, dragged a dozen persons struggling in the water to safety.

Weather Bureau officials said the wave probably was caused by a squall far out over the water.

Walter Zehman, Harvey Manley and Robert F. Walker, of Erie, were cast into the water as the wave overturned their motorboat. They clung to the bottom of the craft until rescued by men in another boat.

BAPTISTS INDORSE MOVIE, RADIO CLEANUP BOYCOTTS

SUPPORT STEPS TO IMPROVE MORALS

Support of all boycotts staged to raise the moral standards of motion pictures, radio programs, magazines and recreational activities was voted today at the closeing business session of the Baptist Young People's Union of America convention.

The delegates also voted to refuse to participate in any war and pledged themselves to support peace movements.

Martin Tarbell, of Waterloo, Ia., was elected president, at the meeting in Hotel William Penn. Other officers named were: Vice-presidents, Wilburg Stewart, Los Angeles, and Francis Middleswart, Williamstown, W. Va.; secretary, Brunston Motley, Indianapolis; treasurer, Lawrence Cadwell, Chicago.

The church's greatest contribution to the world today would be the creation of intelligent public opinion to support all good causes, in the opinion of the Rev. Allyn K. Foster, college student counsellor for the Northern Baptist Convention.

Dr. Foster told the national convention of the Baptist Young People's Union, in the Nixon Theater, last night:

"Create an atmosphere against aggressive war, and the war spirit will educate itself.

"Create an atmosphere of fair play in business, and you'll drive out the crooks.

"Support good movies and newspapers, and you'll have a finer community."

The Story of Elijah :-: CHAPTER I :-: TOLD IN PICTURES By DAN SMITH

When Jeroboam, King of Israel, had set up golden calves for the people to worship, a man of god, sent from Judah to warn him, disobeyed the Lord. And the Lord delivered him unto the lion, and they found his carcass with the lion standing beside it.

Later King Ahab ruled in Israel and worshipped Baal, and did evil in the sight of the Lord. And the prophet Elijah warned Ahab there would be years of famine. Then Elijah hid himself by the brook of Cherith, where the ravens brought him food.

Thence the Lord told Elijah to go to a widow at Zarephath, who would sustain him, and the widow's handful of meal and cruse of oil fed them, but wasted not; and when the widow's son was sick and near unto death, Elijah revived him so that he lived.

And the people of Israel gathered at Carmel and there Elijah bade Ahab have bullocks laid on two altars. And first the priests of Baal called in vain on their god to send down fire, but when Elijah prayed to the Lord, fire came down straightway and burned his sacrifice.

JUNIOR PASTOR TO RECEIVE CHARGE

His own pastor, Dr. W. H. Hetrick, of Connellsville, will give the charge to the Rev. Roy Stanley Schulta, when he is installed as junior pastor of the Bethany Lutheran Church, North Highland avenue, at the 11 a. m. service tomorrow. Dr. H. H. Bagger, president of the Pittsburgh Synod, will give the charge to the congregation.

An informal reception, with Dr. George W. Englar, pastor, in charge, will be given the Rev. and Mrs. Shultz Wednesday evening at the church.

The Rev. Basil Murray will give the charge to Clifford E. Davis in the Bellevue Presbyterian Church Wednesday evening, when Mr. Davis is ordained to the ministry. The Rev. Herbert B. Hudnut, pastor, will preach the sermon.

Mr. Davis, a graduate of the Western Theological Seminary, preached during his seminary training at the Jack's Run Mission.

BISHOP TO TALK AT COMMUNITY SERVICES

Bishop Francis J. McConnell, of New York, an outstanding figure in the church life of America, will be the guest speaker at the community church services to be held in Carnegie Music Hall at 8 p. m. tomorrow. Dr. Schuyler E. Garth will conduct the devotional services, with P. S. Cousley, president of the Allegheny County Sabbath School Association, presiding.

Earl Mitchell will direct the program of sacred music to be presented by the choir of the Shadyside Presbyterian Church and preceding the service, at 7:45 p. m., will give an organ recital. Members of the quartet are Margaret Spaulding Stockdale, Mabel King, Will A. Rhodes and Raymond T. Griffin.

This will be the fourth in the series of summer services in which 23 congregations of Oakland, Schenley Farms, Shadyside, Squirrel Hill and East Liberty are co-operating.

Speaker

BISHOP McCONNELL

The Rev. Dr. Francis J. McConnell, New York, who will speak at the Community Church services tomorrow night in Carnegie Music Hall.

M. E. MINISTERS INDORSE MOVIE CLEANUP

Cleaner, more moral pictures were demanded by the Pittsburgh Methodist Ministers this week in approving the recent protest of the Catholic Church against indecent motion pictures.

The Rev. R. B. Callahan, chairman of the committee on civic and social matters, presented the resolution for improved amusements at the meeting of local Methodist Episcopal ministers and their families held in Epworth Woods.

Commending the Catholic Church for its efforts and calling upon Methodist leaders for wise direction in adding their denominational strength to the movement, the resolution went on to say:

"The Methodist Episcopal Church has always stood for a high standard in amusements. We therefore lift up a solemn note of warning against attendance upon immoral, questionable and misleading theatrical or motion picture performances. Meanwhile we urge the pastors of the Pittsburgh Conference to take this occasion to make plain the position of the church on amusements."

'The Greatest Thing,' Topic for Sermon

"The Greatest Thing Man Does" will be Dr. Clarence Edward Macartney's sermon topic at the 11 a. m. service tomorrow, of the First Presbyterian Church, Sixth avenue. His street pulpit sermon at 7:20 is to be on "Jesus Passeth By" with the regular 8 p. m. topic, "The Everlasting Gospel."

HOME COMING SERVICES SET

Former members of Pittsburgh Post No. 1 will be officially greeted by Col. and Mrs. Frank H. Wise at the first of a series of Home Coming Sunday services to be held in the chapel of the Volunteers of America Building, East Diamond street, tomorrow night. The guests are officers now stationed in other cities and will be here for a conference with Col. and Mrs. Wise, who recently were promoted to the command of entire Pennsylvania.

In addition to several brief speeches, a musical program consisting of solos, duets, quartets and choruses has been arranged.

Vet, 89, Paraded After 7-Mile Hike

CLINTON, Mass. — (INS.) — Trudging alone, Louis Stone, 89-year-old Civil War veteran, last survivor of the boys in blue of this town, walked a mile and a half in the Memorial Day parade, but that was nothing for Stone, who had to have his usual seven and one-half miles walk after breakfast before entering the parade.

Engineers' Reunion Set Next Saturday

The annual reunion of the Fifteenth Engineers, World War regiment recruited in Pittsburgh, will be held next Saturday in West View Park. It had been erroneously reported that the reunion was to have been held today. Mrs. W. H. Greenway is chairman of the committee in charge.

Deaths Outnumber Births in Missouri

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—(INS.)—The grim reaper has been doing a bigger business in Kansas City this year than the stork. Statistics for the first four months show that deaths outnumbered births by 1,849 to 1,741.

CHINESE FREE PA. MISSIONARY

HANKOW, China, July 7. — (AP.)—A mutilated message received at the United States consulate today from a native source indicated the Rev. Howard Smith, missionary of Washington, Pa., who was kidnaped by bandits in May, has been released.

The message said strategy employed by E. O. Clubb, United States consul here, resulted in Mr. Smith's freedom.

Clubb last week went to Chengtu to urge Liu Hsiang, governor of Szechwan Province, to exert pressure for the missionary's return.

The consulate was checking on authenticity of the message. No direct word has been received from Clubb.

Mr. Smith was kidnaped by Gen. Ho Lung, renegade, who demanded $35,000 cash and $3,500 in medical supplies.

HOME TO MARK ANNIVERSARY

"Life's Key Notes" will be the subject of the Rev. F. O. Schuh, pastor of Bethlehem Lutheran Church, at the forty-first anniversary exercises of St. John's Lutheran Children's and Old Folks' Home at Mars, at 3:30 p. m., tomorrow.

The Castle Shannon Civic Band will play throughout the afternoon, giving a half hour's concert before the service. Luncheon will be served by the ladies of the St. Paul, Gibsonia, Trinity and Wildwood parish, of which the Rev. John Richardson is pastor.

SERVICES SET FOR BAPTISTS

Delegates to the Baptist Young People's Union convention, which closes here tomorrow, will attend church services in a body at 11 a. m. tomorrow. Delegates will meet at William Penn Hotel at 10 a. m., where free transportation will be provided.

The churches and delegations which will attend their services are:

Sandusky Street — Ohio, Maryland and Wyoming; Union—West Virginia and Indiana; Temple—New York, Wisconsin and Montana; First Baptist Church—Pennsylvania, outside Pittsburgh; Mt. Lebanon — Illinois, Michigan and Iowa; Bellevue — Minnesota and New Jersey; Mt. Washington —Massachusetts, Nevada, California and Oregon; Beth Eden—South Dakota, Rhode Island and Missouri; East End—Washington, D. C., and Colorado, and Crafton —Kansas.

DELEGATE HIKES TO MEETING

It's only a 75-mile walk from Kansas City to Pittsburgh for Pearl Hawkins, 22-year-old Kansas City girl delegate to the Baptist Young Peoples convention here.

She arrived at the William Penn Hotel late yesterday after hitch-hiking all the way. Entire expense of the convention trip was only $2.30, including registration at the convention.

Although prepared to walk to Pittsburgh, Pearl did very little hiking but a whole lot of hitching. She said:

People were awfully nice and it wasn't any trouble at all to get rides."

She hasn't decided whether to hike back home after the convention closes Sunday.

Scientist Church Topic Announced

"Sacrement" will be the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The golden text will be: "The bread of God is he which cometh down from heaven and giveth life unto the world."

Haverford Wins Psychology Test Seventh Year

PHILADELPHIA. — (INS.)— For the seventh year in succession, Haverford College has surpassed all other colleges taking the psychological examination for freshmen given by the American Council of Education.

Haverford this year topped the list of 203 colleges whose freshmen took the examination, by scoring an average of 260. Black Mountain College, of North Carolina, and the University of Chicago, were second and third, respectively, with scores of 220 and 217.89.

Auto Hits Woman Getting Off Trolley

Struck by an automobile after alighting from a street car at Brookline boulevard and Pioneer avenue, Margaret Ward, 27, of 2308 Beaufort avenue, was treated at South Side Hospital early today for burns. L. C. Simmons, 34, of 512 Ormsby avenue, driver of the auto, was given a summons, police said.

TAFT CABINET MEMBER DIES

CHICAGO, July 7.—(AP.)—A 10-day siege of bronchial pneumonia proved fatal last night to Franklin MacVeigh, 96, Secretary of the Treasury under President Taft.

MacVeagh was born in Phoenixville, Pa., in 1838. He was graduated from Yale in 1862, studied law at Columbia University and was admitted to the New York bar. In 1866, he abandoned his law practice and came to Chicago to establish the wholesale grocery firm of Franklin MacVeagh & Co.

In 1896 he ran for United States Senator on the Democratic ticket but was defeated. In 1909 he was appointed Secretary of the Treasury by President Taft, serving until 1913.

MacVeagh's brother, Wayne, was Attorney General of the United States in the cabinet of President James A. Garfield, and a nephew, Charles MacVeagh, was at one time ambassador to Japan.

His great-nephew, Charles MacVeagh, Jr., is now minister to Greece.

CROWDS TO LINE COURSE FOR REGATTA

One week from today the banks of the Allegheny River at Oakmont will be lined with thousands as the two-day Sun-Telegraph motorboat regatta for the William Randolph Hearst Gold Cup trophy begins.

This move to give Pittsburgh something unusual in aquatic sports promises to attract tremendous crowds from all parts of the district.

Distinguished motorboat racing authorities and drivers are coming to attend and to enter.

Sixteen five-mile races will be run off at speeds thrilling to spectators.

The river is to be clear of other traffic for the event in which more than 100 speedy craft will cross each other's bows in the space of a few hundred yards.

The races, in charge of the Oakmont Boat Club, will be so arranged that an equal number of heats will be run on the second day as on the first.

No admission charge is to be made. Traffic control and arrangements for parking will amply care for the huge crowd expected.

JUICE PROTECTS FRUIT'S BEAUTY

WASHINGTON, July 7.—(AP.)—A new beauty treatment to keep aging complexions youthful has been found by government scientists, and though it's for fruits and not ladies, housewives as well as fruit men are expected to benefit.

The new "beauty secret," which protects fruit against the ugliness of age, is simply a matter of being sprayed with pineapple juice. This treatment solves a problem that has vexed fruit growers and driers since time immemorial—the tendency of fruits and vegetables to turn dark where the surface is freshly cut.

Cush discolored products are not well received and often cause a loss to the producer. For years sulphur dioxide has been used to prevent discoloration, but much of it remains in the fruit and is objectionable to many customers, says the Department of Agriculture. The new "youth secret" was discovered by two of the department's scientists.

Hatfield Files For U. S. Senate

CHARLESTON, W. Va., July 7.—(AP.)—United States Senator Henry D. Hatfield has filed formal notice of his candidacy for renomination by the Republican party.

GALA CELEBRATION : Triple Program On WCAE : OPENS NEW STATION

Three Shows Combined Tonight

Three half-hour programs from New York, Denver and Los Angeles are combined in a single broadcast heard over WCAE tonight from 11:30 until 1 o'clock, in the dedication of Denver's new 50,000-watt station KOA.

In Mayfair

—With—

Patricia Pitt

There's a terrific flurry of packing this week-end in many a Pittsburgh and Sewickley home.

For the Iron City Fishing Club will set forth Monday for its camp on Georgian Bay, Canada. Some of the members have already gone, and others will join fellow campers later on.

What's more, those going Monday will have special Pullman cars, special baggage car from here to Midland, Canada, from where they'll sail on the steamer "Midland City" for the camp.

Fifty-Third Summer For Club at Camp

The Iron City Fishing Club has become an established institution—proof, this will be the club's fifty-third summer at camp.

Going to camp this summer will be the W. Stewart Horners, Mrs. Harriet M. Thoburn, Dr. and Mrs. Stanley Smith, Esther Smith, Dr. and Mrs. A. W. Sherrill, Dr. and Mrs. George J. Wright, the B. W. Lewises and their small son, Mrs. J. W. Vickerman, Mrs. William E. Conroy, Isabel Bell, George J. Wright, Jr., Eleanor Wright and the James A. Wilsons.

One large family party will be the Applegates, of Sewickley. Applegates going will be the Robert A. Applegates, Mary Applegate, Robert A. Applegate, Jr., Samuel Applegate, the George G. Applegates and Lowrie Applegate.

Horner Families To Be in Party

Others going will be Mrs. Albert Graham, Bettie Lou Zercher, Harry C. Graham, the Elmer L. Kidneys, the T. D. McCloskeys, Katherine Lilley, Bettie Lilley, the C. B. Steffeys, Stewart Steffey, Anne Steffey, Mrs. John R. Voskamp, John Voskamp.

Dr. and Mrs. D. Willard Flint will leave Monday, as will Dr. and Mrs. Harry J. Horner, Dr. and Mrs. Stuart Horner, the Walter A. Scotts, Robert Scott, Walter A. Scott, Jr., Porter Scott.

The Kirkland Wiley Todds and their family will be in the party, also the Henry Tranters, Dr. and Mrs. Albert E. Dietrich, the William M. Parkins, W. Wallace Bell, the Rev. Dr. John F. Jose, the Sion B. Smiths.

Out-of-Town Folk Swell Camp Group

And there'll be a group of out-of-town folks at the club. From Butler, Pa., will come Harry Holiday, Sr., Charlotte Rutherford Holiday, William G. Holiday, Helen Holiday, Harry Holiday, Jr., Matthew Holiday, Albert Holiday.

Wheeling campers will be the D. Alan Burts, the junior D. A. Burts and the Kent B. Halls and family.

The Truman S. Morgans, of New York, will be there, also Dr. and Mrs. Robert J. Kunkle and family, of Gloversville, N. Y.; the Bennett Chapples and the Bennett S. Chapples, of Middletown, O.; the Harry C. Crawfords, Harry C. Crawford, Jr., Helen Crawford, Jack Crawford and Billy Crawford, of Bethlehem.

Fanny Whitman Bride Today

The outstanding wedding of today will be that of Fanny Glenn Whitman, daughter of the Ezra B. Whitmans, Beaver road, Sewickley, and Thomas Brian Parsons, son of the I. Manning Parsonses, of Baltimore, which is to take place at 4 o'clock this afternoon in St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Sewickley.

Last night the parents of the bride entertained at a dinner for out-of-town guests and members of the bridal party.

400 Dogs Entered In Greensburg Show

An important event of today—all day—is the Greensburg dog show on the polo grounds, Greensburg. More than 400 dogs have been entered—almost as large an entry as at the Sewickley dog show in late June.

Countess Campello Guest in Sewickley

Sewickley has a distinguished young guest—the Countess Campello, of Rome, the former Fanny Dusmet, daughter of the Marchese and Marchesa Dusmet de Smours, of Rome. The young countess is the guest of her grandmother, Mrs. James B. Oliver, with whom she made the trip from Europe to the States.

Thomas Murrays Have New Son

The Thomas E. Murrays, of Beacon street, announce the birth of a son—Thomas E. Murray, Jr.—who was born at Mercy Hospital.

His mother is the former Jane McCaskey, of Tennyson avenue.

Chestermans' Elizabeth To Marry in August

In August the Francis J. Chestermans and family will be off for Hampton Falls, N. H., to be the guests of Mrs. Charles L. White, sister of the Chestermans.

And there the Chestermans' daughter, Elizabeth Newell Chesterman, will be married to Ira Gorman Dietrick August 18. Elinor Hadley, of Maplewood, N. J., the bride's roommate at Wheaton College, will be her only attendant, and Ellis Dietrick will be best man. Robert Moore, a nephew of the bridegroom, and John Chesterman, a brother of the bride, will be ushers.

McKees Rocks Girl To Wed in Fall

At a dinner party given Sunday evening by Mr. and Mrs. I. Stalin in their home in McKees Rocks, announcement was made of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Esther Stalin, to Harry Schreiber, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Schreiber, of Farrell. A fall wedding is planned.

Miss Stanny, R. J. Ziefel Married

At a pretty ceremony before members of the families this morning, Miss Madeline M. Stanny, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Stanny, of Brentwood, became the bride of Ralph J. Ziefel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Florence A. Ziefel, of Knoxville.

The ceremony took place at a nuptial mass in St. Basil's Roman Catholic Church. The Rev. Leonard Stenger, the pastor, read the ceremony and sang the mass.

The bride wore a frock of embroidered white organdie with a white cartwheel hat. She carried a spring-like bouquet of yellow roses, blue delphinium and lilies of the valley.

Miss Dionysia Stenger was the maid of honor and the bride's only attendant, and her gown was of blue net with which she wore a matching hat and carried pink roses. Florance Sleicher was the best man.

There was a wedding breakfast in Webster Hall immediately after the wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Ziefel will take a motor trip through the East.

Health Farm Opening Near

The date for the opening of the health farm for children has been set for Monday by the Volunteers of America. The news was received enthusiastically today by the youngsters who will comprise the first group to be taken to the farm, those who come from the downtown-North Side district. Every two weeks, a new group of children will be taken to the farm.

The opening will be a gala affair. The children will be taken in buses and motor cars at 9 o'clock in the morning from the Volunteer Building, East Diamond street. Arriving at the farm, near Wildwood, they will be "transferred" from the clothing they wear on the trip to bathing suits, sun-tan suits, baseball suits or overalls, depending upon what they expect to do on their first day at the farm. After luncheon they will spend the afternoon at their favorite games.

The farm has been equipped with a merry-go-round, May pole, chutes, see-saws, space for baseball, sand boxes and a splendid wading pool. Shower bath houses for the boys and girls and an open-air shower for the tiny tots have been erected.

Miss Yellig Giving Dinner for Whites

MELTON VEAL

Two and one-half pounds of ham sliced thin.
Two and one-half pounds of veal sliced thin.
One and one-half dozen hard-cooked eggs.
One heaping tablespoon of acidulated gelatine.
One-half teaspoon of lemon flavoring in the gelatine package.

In the bottom of a double boiler (the pan must be first well buttered), place a layer of ham then a layer of veal then a layer of hard-cooked eggs (sliced on a slicer), a little pepper, then a layer of ham, veal, hard-cooked eggs, etc., until you have used up all of your meat. Now make a thin paste, almost a dough, out of flour and water and have it about one-inch thick and put over the top of the meat, shutting up all the air holes; this is simply to make it air tight and keep in all the steam. Place over boiling water, cover and steam five (5) hours; then pull off the dough and pour off the liquid, which should be a cup or maybe two. Bring this liquid to a boil and pour over the gelatine, which has previously been dissolved in a little cold water, add the lemon flavoring and pour back over the meat. Weight it down with a plate on which is placed an iron or brick. When cool put in ice box until thoroughly congealed.

There is enough salt in the ham to season so it is not necessary to add any salt. The important part is to have your butcher slice both the ham and veal very thin. The thinner the better, not over one-eighth of an inch thick. I use a wooden potatoe masher or rolling pin to flatten meat if it is not thin enough. Serve for luncheon.

CHOCOLATE FRUIT PATTIES

One cup flour.
One-half teaspoon baking powder.
One-half teaspoon salt.
Two-thirds cup sugar.
Two eggs, well beaten.
Two squares chocolate, melted.
One-half cup nut meats, chopped.
One-half cup seeded raisins, chopped.
Four teaspoons candied cherries, chopped.
Four teaspoons candied pineapple, chopped.
Four teaspoons melted butter.

Sift flour once; measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift together three times. Add sugar to eggs and beat until light; then add chocolate, nuts, fruits and butter. Add flour, mixing thoroughly. Drop from spoon on greased baking sheet. Bake at 350 degrees for eight minutes.

EMILY EARHART,
Box 175, Avonmore.

PARMESAN EGG PLATTER

Four egg whites.
One-fourth cup parmesan cheese, grated.
One-half teaspoon salt.
Four whole egg yolks.
Two teaspoons butter.

Beat egg whites to stiff froth. Fold in grated cheese and salt. Place mixture in four mounds on buttered platter. Make a small well in each mound. Place one unbroken egg yolk in each well; dot with butter; bake. After removing from the oven garnish parmesan egg platter with parsley and serve on same platter on which it was baked. Bake about 10 minutes.

MRS. DAN L. BUTLER,
829 Ohio River boulevard, Avalon.

ONE-TWO-THREE JAM

One cup rhubarb.
Two cups red raspberries.
Three cups sugar.

Cut the rhubarb into small pieces and pick over the berries. Add the sugar and boil slowly until it is thick when a little of it is cooled on a saucer. Seal in jars.

MRS. G. SCHAFFER,
1164 Ilen street.

BAKELESS CAKE

One-half pound graham crackers.
One cup dates, chopped.
One-half cup raisins, chopped.
Two tablespoons chopped orange peel.
One-half cup citron sliced very thin.
One-fourth teaspoon grated nutmeg.
One-fourth teaspoon ground allspice.
One cup cut marshmallows.
One cup thick cream.
One-half cup currants.
Two tablespoons chopped candied cherries.
One scant teaspoon cinnamon.
One-fourth teaspoon ground cloves.
One-fourth teaspoon salt.
One cup chopped nuts.

Crumble crackers fine. Soften currants in hot water and drain. Add spices and salt to dry cracker crumbs and mix. Add other ingredients. Marshmallows should be cut in small pieces, soaked in cream, then added last. Mix thoroughly until cracker crumbs are all moistened. Pack into square tin or mold lined with wax paper and let stand in refrigerator 12 hours. Slice thin and serve with or without whipped cream or hard sauce. Makes two-pound loaf. Will keep in refrigerator several weeks.

MRS. J. E. ESPEY,
1005 Sheffield avenue, Aliquippa.

PEAR MERINGUE WITH CUSTARD SAUCE

Select six pears of uniform size. Wipe and remove a thin paring, leaving stems on. Put in a casserole add one-half cup of sugar and a few thin shavings from the rind of a lemon. Pour over one-third cup of water, cover and bake until pears are soft. Remove pears from syrup and let stand until pears are thoroughly chilled. Beat the whites of two eggs until stiff, then add two tablespoons powdered sugar and spread each pear with meringue. Sprinkle with powdered sugar and bake until delicately browned. Pour custard sauce around it.

Sauce—Mix one and one-half tablespoons cornstarch, one-quarter cup sugar, pinch salt. Pour two cups scalding milk gradually on the mixture. Return to double boiler and cook ten minutes, stirring until it thickens. Beat the yolks of two eggs and dilute with a little hot mixture, then put together. Cook two minutes, chill. Flavor with vanilla or lemon extract.

Honorable Mention

Mrs. WILLIAM NICKEL,
818 Cedar avenue.

MOLDED CHICKEN AND CUCUMBER SALAD

Three cups canned tomatoes.
Six celery stalks.
Two chopped onions.
One teaspoon sugar.
Three teaspoons salt.
One clove.
One-quarter teaspoon pepper.
Two tablespoons gelatine.
One-half cup cold water.
Diced chicken.
Sliced cucumbers.

Combine tomatoes, celery cut in pieces, chopped onions, salt, sugar, pepper and clove. Simmer one-half hour, then strain. While hot add gelatin which has been soaked in the cold water. Arrange alternate layers of diced chicken and sliced cucumbers in a cold wet mold. Pour tomatoe mixture over all and chill until firm. Serve on lettuce with mayonnaise. Serves 10.

GLADYS EBERT,
813 Kilbuck street, Glenfield.

ORANGE TOAST

One-fourth cup orange juice.
One teaspoon grated orange rind.
One-half cup sugar.
Six slices buttered toast.

Mix orange juice, rind and sugar. Spread on hot buttered toast and put in hot oven or under broiler to brown. Serves six.

AUGUSTA FISCHER,
414 W. Eighth avenue, Tarentum.

RASPBERRY MERINGUE CAKE

Seven egg whites.
Two cups of granulated sugar.
Two teaspoons vinegar.
Few grains salt.
One teaspoon vanilla.

Beat egg whites until stiff and dry. Sift the sugar in gradually, very small amount at a time. Then add vinegar, salt, vanilla, beating constantly and long. Butter two 10-inch layer cake pans, line with wax paper, and butter again. Bake in a very slow oven (250 F.) 50 to 60 minutes. Remove from oven, turn over, and remove paper immediately. Cool. Spread whipped cream and chopped nuts between the layers. On top first put fresh raspberries with plenty of whipped cream over the berries, and dot with a few more berries. Place in refrigerator until ready to serve.

ELIZABETH SYKES,
2838 Broadway, Dormont.

FROZEN ICE CREAM CAKE

Sponge cake.
One pint vanilla ice cream.
One cup raspberry or strawberry jam.

Line bottom and sides of a freezing tray of automatic refrigerator with sponge cake, sliced about one-quarter inch thick. Spread one cup of ice cream over cake, spread the jam over the ice cream. Place in refrigerator and freeze at lowest temperature until firm. Cut in squares and serve at once.

MISS ANN AVERBACH,
603 North St. Clair street.

SAUSAGE-FILLED PRUNES

One and one-half cups cooked prunes.
One pound bulk sausage.
One-half cup finely chopped green sweet pepper.
One-fourth cup finely chopped parsley.
One hard-cooked egg.

Slit prunes on one side and remove pits. Fry sausage and break into small pieces. Drain off fat. Mix sausage with green pepper and parsley. Fill prunes with the mixture and lay in a greased pan. Bake 10 minutes in a moderate oven. Press the yolk and white of egg through sieve separately and garnish prunes after removing from oven. Serve hot. Platter may be garnished with thin rings of pepper and a prune placed in each. Allow four prunes to a serving.

SOVIET MAKES PROPAGANDA WITH JAZZ

By LINDESAY PARROTT
International News Service.

MOSCOW, July 7.—American jazz, once denounced as "bourgeois triviality," and later taken up as dance music only now is to be turned to definitely "revolutionary" purpose.

Soviet composers are to be interested in jazz and stimulated to produce jazz music, both instrumental and vocal, that will portray both Communist life and Communist ideology.

And to this end the Educational and Musical Research Society has organized a series of experimental jazz concerts at which the development of jazz will be illustrated from its earliest Afro-American origins to the "jazz operas" of the present day.

R. J. Golovachev, director of the society, declares:

"The lively and energetic rhythm of jazz naturally attracts and inspires Russian audiences. By organizing jazz concerts followed by short lectures we hope to interest Soviet composers and artists. The revolutionary jazz music created in Germany, of which a fair example is Eisler's Beggars' Opera, clearly shows that jazz may develop along socially valuable lines.

"The principal deficiencies of jazz as revolutionary music are caused by the fact that it was born and developed as a part of the restaurant menu. We hope that visits of foreign jazz orchestras will serve as a further impetus to Soviet artists and composers who so far have entirely neglected jazz music."

Although there has been no previous attempt to make it "socially valuable," the popularity of jazz has increased steadily in the Soviet Union.

American tunes, some of them two or three years old, are the favorite dance music of the holiday making tavarish and his tavarishka. The hotels of Moscow and Leningrad boast—and even advertise—jazz orchestras which copy faithfully the uniforms and antics of American jazz-players.

So far, none of the more celebrated jazz orchestras of the United States has visited the Soviet. The production of syncopated music, however, has been stimulated recently by tours of Prof. Dantlovski's jazz band, from Poland, and of the Polish Chor Dana, a jazz choir.

And when some Soviet genius discovers the Russian equivalent for boop-boop-a-doop Russia's tin-pan alley will be in full swing—and even a People's Commissariat of Saxophone Playing may eventually be established.

LIGHTLY TRIPPING IT IN ALL-WHITE

By PRUNELLA WOOD

THERE ARE all kinds of white shoes for daytime wear, which among them offer a tempting variety of fine points to make one long to own them all. There is the scuffless heel, for instance, which declines to knick itself on subway steps or gravel, and which throws off grass stain the way a duck sheds water. There is a great revival of buckskin which is very easily cleaned and which is soft as a glove, though it keeps its shape as well as any walking shoe leather. And there are sandals to cool the feet, strapped shoes to help tender feet walk firmly, and dress shoes which can boast a real dressmaker touch of elegance.

* * *

SOME MODELS can be found which will enchance the gingham dress, the bridesmaid's dress or the trig summer tailleur. Perforations are very popular for shoe trimmings, and the great success of the low-heeled shoe does not mean that one cannot ask for and get high spike heels easily.

* * *

THE stocking of pale pastel hue is coming along bravely as a partner for white shoes, after years during which stockings of suntan shades or no stockings at all were the accepted style. When one has a pretty ankle a pale lavender stocking looks very nice over it, or a shade of some color note in the costume.

(Copyright, 1934, King Features Synd., Inc.)

Top, white buckskin with a diagonal band of perforations over the toe, and narrow perforation strips aft; scuffless heel. Lower left, a white kidskin sandal with buckskin heels and inserts—excellent for spectator sports wear. Center, a white buckskin shoe with a workmanlike strap and buckle. Right, a tie pump of white buckskin with an unusual toe decoration of perforation strips. The white hat sketched has the least crown seen on any summer hat to date.

Try This Interesting Air Dictionary Quiz, Then Test Your Neighborhood Friends With It.

By J. JAMES MOORE
Pittsburgh Wing Commander

Hello, Junior Birdmen! Today we have that air dictionary test that I told you about the other day. Try it first yourself and then give it to your parents. Then try it on the boys and girls on your street. Show them what you have already learned about aviation by joining our movement.

The Air Dictionary List, the first section of which has just been concluded, is the most popular of all the features we have published so far.

Of course, the Air Insignia (and there's one of these published today, too) is fast gaining, but from the number of letters I receive, I still give the Air Dictionary the leading spot. But there will be other features inaugurated in our column soon to rival these two, so keep your eyes peeled on the column.

Don't miss any of the Air Dictionary Lists, part two of which will follow shortly, and be sure you clip out all of the U. S. aircraft.

Remember, we can't supply back features. If you cut them out for your scrap books and studied them for future reference in your aviation and model building work, let's see just how much good they did you. Let's see how many of the definitions you understood, how many you remember.

This test is given in the spirit of fun, not work! No one is set over you to see that you don't peek at your scrap books. But we leave it to yourself not to. There are no prizes, we are not asking you to let us know how you made out.

Go over this list of questions, write the answers down on a piece of paper. And then on Monday, when I publish the correct answers, let's see how many you had right, just for the fun of it.

All questions below are taken from air terms, words and phrases published in the first section of our Aviation Dictionary feature.

1—What is dihedral angle? This one should be easy, since we used it in all the models of our model building course.

2—What is a ring cowling? Most Army and Navy planes have them.

3—Describe the purpose of an altimeter. Did you know that the altitude record in a plane is held by Gustave Lemoine, a Frenchman? He reached a height of 44,819 feet.

4—Give the chief difference between a rigid and a nonrigid aerostat. Non-rigid aerostats were filled with hot air in the days of George Washington and Benjamin Franklin.

5—How can you tell a cambered from a non-cambered wing? The Wright Brothers, after early experiments, cambered their wings.

6—What is down wash? You have heard of "prop" wash many times, but this is probably a new one.

7—What is the purpose of a bank indicator? This instrument is usually combined with a turn indicator.

8—Define center of gravity. This is a difficult question but every model builder should become familiar with it.

9—How is air speed different from land speed? Air speed is measured by the rush of air through a tube usually located on a strut near the tip of the wing. The rush of air produces a speed indication on the air speed instrument.

10—What is a catapult used for? There's one on all of Uncle Sam's battleships!

11—What is aviation? And don't let this one fool you!

12—What is an airplane? You will be surprised how few people can correctly define this one either!

13—What is the advantage of an adjustable pitch propeller over the set propeller? This is question No. 13 and of course we had to make it hard. Some props can be adjusted from the cockpit, you know.

14—What is the purpose of the ailerons on the wings of planes? The ailerons are moved by moving the joy stick from left to right.

15—What is an airfoil? There's a much easier word than this for the same number, but that would be giving you the answer.

16—What is meant by acrobatics in the air? Al Williams, popular Navy pilot, is one of the best acrobatic fliers in this country.

17—What is an amphibian plane? If you can't answer this one, wait a while. The New Junior Birdmen Plane will be an amphibian and one look at it will give you the answer.

18—What is dope used for? Model Builders use it on their larger craft.

19—When is the word "contact" used in aviation and for what purpose? And here's a tip. Our definition was partially wrong. Can you tell just where?

20—What is a catwalk? You'll find them in rigid airships, not planes.

Those questions are not so difficult. As a matter of fact I'll bet that you could have given me the answers to several even before you studied the air dictionary lists.

In Monday's column, I will give you the answers to the questions and the list in which the definition referred to appears. See how many you can answer over the week-end.

PENNA. SINGER GOING IN OPERA

HARRISBURG, July 7.—(AP.)—A girl who couldn't "get along" with her piano lessons, but who dreamed that some day she'd be an opera singer, is about to see her dreams come true.

Louise Baer, daughter of Cameron Baer, Harrisburg telephone official, will make her debut as Micaela in "Carmen" at the opening of the summer season in Asbury Park, N. J., July 13.

The young soprano displayed talent even before she reached the high school age, but efforts to train her at the piano were futile.

When she should have been at the keys, her parents explain, Louise could be found deep in study of the life and career of Geraldine Farrar.

So they sent her to Dresden, Germany, where she studied for two years under Fritz Busch.

ILLINOIS SALES TAX SUCCESS

Universal Service.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., July 7.—During the first six months of the year, the Illinois sales tax provided $17,918,005 for the Illinois treasury, according to State Treasurer John C. Martin.

If the proceeds of the tax for the second half of the year are the same, the total for the year will exceed by about two millions the $34,000,000 anticipated when the fight for the adoption of the tax opened.

At the same time the sales tax has made it possible entirely to eliminate the state property tax, thereby lifting from the shoulders of the taxpayers a tax burden amounting to about $35,000,000, it was pointed out.

Jimmy Wallington In Traffic Court

NEW YORK, July 7.—(AP.)—James Wallington wasn't exactly announcing, but his talk was a success. The traffic light turned red without warning, and he had no opportunity to stop his automobile, hence the summons, the radio announcer told the court. The judge suspended sentence.

Way to Find Out How Primo Lost, Tackle the Champ

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

An Italian diplomat is over here to find out how Primo lost his title.

Best way to do that is to put on the gloves with Maxey.

History shows that diplomats never put on the gloves. They are the matchmakers of trouble.

They are steaming up a nice kettle of grief in Europe right now. In a few months the soup will be ready.

The year's Nobel peace prize should go to Bolivia and Paraguay for starting a war in a place where it didn't interfere with anybody.

But nations in Europe are closer together than tables in a night club. When a fight starts, everybody gets a share of it.

P. R. R. Names Body To Settle Disputes

Formation of a board of adjustment to settlement of differences between the management and train and engine service men, was announced today by the Pennsylvania Railroad. In this the Pennsylvania leads all American railroads in forming such a body as provided under the recent amendment to the railway labor act. It will function as "The Pennsylvania Railroad Engine and Train Service System Board of Adjustment." The board will be composed of 18 members, nine representing the company and nine the workers.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., July 7.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

All I know is just what little I see in the papers. See today where Mr. Roosevelt is putting a "blab" (you know what a blab is? It's a thing you put over a calf's mouth to keep it from eating between meals). Well, he is putting a "blab" on these so-called "officials" who are making speeches around the country trying to tell what the New Deal has in mind. He has informed 'em, "you go ahead and deal, and shut up about it, a dealer is not supposed to entertain along with his dealing." So the next time you hear a fellow speaking for the White House, you just holler "yeah?"

Yours, WILL.

Two-Thirds Barrel Beer Drinkers' Mark

NEW YORK, July 7.—(AP.)—Julius Liebman, president of the New York State Brewers' Association, estimated that the average adult resident of the state consumed two-thirds of a barrel of beer during the past 12 months.

Total sales were 6,203,000 barrels. These weighed 800,000 tons and upheld New York's reputation for beer drinking, for they represented 16.3 per cent of the nation's beer consumption.

Two trucks and two automobiles were saved from destruction by fire by Rankin firemen, who pulled them out of a garage in Maple way, Rankin, late yesterday. Flames from a burning rubbish pile had spread to one of the trucks. The damage was estimated at $500.

HOBO FIDDLER LEAVES $1,281

International News Service.

PAW PAW, Mich., July 8.—A hobo, unidentified, died in the "jungles" outside Paw Paw yesterday.

Officials came to take away his body and bury it in a pauper's grave.

In his pocket they found $1,281 in cash.

In the shack where he had been living police found a violin, and it was recalled that he had been seen on the streets of Paw Paw, playing the instrument and collecting pennies from passersby.

MILK DEALERS FACE HEARINGS

HARRISBURG, July 7.—(AP.)—Dealers who have failed to file bonds insuring against payment for milk purchased from producers are being called before the Milk Control Board to show cause why they should not be barred from obtaining licenses. They also face fines for unlicensed operation.

The milk control law provides no dealer officially may be refused a license until he has been given a hearing.

Beginning Tuesday, a series of hearings will be held. About 100 dealers will be arraigned. Each has not filed a bond and, as a result, has been unable to get a license.

The hearings will establish whether the dealers have been operating, and if so, why they have not filed the required bonds.

Once the board has refused to license a dealer after a hearing, the dealer is subject to a fine of $100 a day if he continues to operate.

To date the board has licensed about 3,000 dealers.

Politician's Job Easy With Help of Twin

International News Service.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., July 7—The country's politicians can look with envy on Fred Thomas, of Harnett County, for Fred knows how to enjoy the advantages of office without undergoing all the burdens.

Fred has a twin brother, Thomas, who resembles him closely. That's the secret.

There was the recent meeting of the county convention at Lillington. Fred secretly sent Thomas in his place. The convention called for a speech from Fred, and Thomas rose to comply for his brother. The proxy's address was so good that he drew continued applause.

Then party members found that Fred was in Erwin, N. C., all the time, quietly mixing prescriptions in his drug store.

Now the Harnett County Democratic committee is threatening to examine Fred every time the Legislature meets, to make certain that he is actually representing them. Thomas is a fine fellow, they say, but they named Fred as their spokesmen, and they want nobody but Fred.

SPEAK UP, SISTERS :-: Glances Into the Realms of Domesticity and Romance :-: By MARION BRUNOT

Love, Fear Go Together Sometimes

I feel like the man on the flying trapeze when someone tells me they have followed my advice, and to the letter. And they have come up whole.

Yes, the world is mine, and I am looking down on it then.

It's like the bride, when her biscuits are good. Or a woman who has just been paid for a dance marathon.

I'm IT. And I'm thrilled.

Dear Miss Brunot:

I read your column every day, and feel I am justified in following it. I take this opportunity to congratulate you.

Miss Brunot

Not long ago a friend of mine wrote you and told you of some trouble he was having with his girl. After reading your answer he carried it out exactly, and now everything goes swimmingly. He recommended you to me.

I am a young man of 20, and in love with a girl of 17. I have asked her for dates, and she has never yet refused. And yet she keeps reminding me, I am THREE YEARS HER SENIOR.

Why does she do this? At first I took it as a polite way of telling me she didn't care to see me any more. I asked her, and she said it was to the contrary. That she enjoyed being with me. Also her girl friend tells me that when she is at a party, and the crowd is roaring at her wisecracks, it is then everyone has a good time.

I have never taken her to a party, myself. So you see I don't know how much truth there is in the other girl's statement. But when she and I are out together all her pep is gone, and I have the first time yet to hear her make a wise or clever remark. Why is it, that she is so different when with me?

Do you think she is just going out with me for a good time? In plain English, is she taking me for a sucker?

PUZZLED ROMEO.

FEAR CREEPS IN

Love sometimes works a subduing effect upon a lively girl. Fear and temerity creep in, and the wisecrack refuses to come to her lips. Perhaps that is the answer to the lack of pep in your best girl.

I believe she cares for you, and the fact she refers so often to the three years you are ahead of her in age, may only be that she can't think of anything else to say. I wouldn't let this remark worry you, Puzzled Romeo. For after all three years isn't anything to surmount. It is about as it should be. The man should be a trifle older than the woman. It gives him the necessary confidence and protective skill.

Why don't you manage to go to some of these parties the girl friend has described? You might get a real line on your friend by doing so. We should never be too remote in our love affairs. Mingling with mutual companions helps quite a lot to clear away certain doubts.

You seem to be a fellow who goes about your social contacts carefully, and it is the wise thing to do. The girl a man loves works either havoc or good for him. She can be an influence toward success, or, alas! failure. "My only books were women's looks, and folly's all they've taught me . . ." moaned Lord Byron. And it was too bad!

We can get as much of a kick out of life by following up our leads meticulously as we can by jumping headlong into everything. It is the wise frog who looks before he leaps is an adage not to be laughed at.

SEEKS ACQUAINTANCE

Dear Miss Brunot:

My problem is like many others. Yet it is different. I am almost 16, and will be a junior in high school this fall. I like a boy who was in one of my classes. It is a large class, and not everyone is acquainted. This boy and myself don't speak. And it might make him think me bold if I made the advance. He is not good looking, neither is he ugly. He doesn't talk much, nor does he go in for athletics. I don't know why I like him so much. But I DO.

I think he likes me, for often I catch him looking my way.

But when he sees me looking he turns quickly.

I would like to get acquainted with him. I thought maybe I might say something light the next time I saw him. I have seen other boys for whom I have had fits of liking. But these have passed. ANXIOUS.

MYSTERIOUS REASON

Aren't there mutual friends who can present you? If not so, I see no harm in saying something light, as you suggest, and thus making an opening for the friendship you crave. There are always the ones we like, and the reason why we cannot tell. That is nature . . .

We are just sort of instruments in the making up of the universe, you and I. Even if we do think our own everyday happenings important, Anxious. I am sure this class you speak about must be interesting. So many of you together. All young and all gazing toward the future. What will it bring to each one? Will it bring happiness? I hope so. Will it bring success and friends and goodly experience. I hope all that, too.

Fits of liking such as you mention, are parts of all our youth. We meet someone and garner in some of the wheat and some of the chaff. And then we go on. We learn our best lessons from human contact. It is the companionable person who arrives. It is the one we find in crowds who is the most contented.

Miss Brunot will be glad to answer letters submitted to her by readers.

HOT WEATHER ART -o- -o- -o- By NELL BRINKLEY

It is more fun to see it than to do it—when the weather is "inferno furioso." More fun to turn the pages of another artist's work than to fill pages with one's own, when the brazen yet clouded sky sits down upon one. To follow his alluring line, his enchanting color, his excellent ideas, to grow soft with the sentiment he limns, to cheer at his fun; instead of making lines and hunting for ideas in your own workshop!

Art is long in dog days, and so is Time. Making it is not half the joy to its purveyor that it is in the crisper months. Drawing paper is like blotting paper. That little old sharp black devil the pen sinks in, poor thing, and grows sea weed on its nib. Ink flows hither and yon, and not where you—clever thing—want it to, and usually are so skillfully able to make it do. Down to the kitchen oven (the OVEN this weather!) to dry the beautiful lady out before you dare apply the art gum to the faint pencil lines beneath the spider web of ink ones.

Elbows stick to the paper lovingly, and will not be dragged away when the artist wants to execute a handsome flourish.

The brain box that is usually so bright and willing has stuck or something with the humidity, just like the doors of the new cupboard and six out of the seven high boy drawers; and out of the mist and the thickness and the clouds, there come few and scrawny ideas. To THINK in this weather—that is, for one's self? How much sweeter to lie on the top of Pike's Peak and read and look at what some one ELSE has thought!

In the first picture you see a lady artist as she thought perhaps she might look in her "stujo" this summer—pajamas, her new black and silver gew gaws, bangs, black and white strap slippers, a breath of make up, sitting upon her new Italian stool covered with the delectable tapestry that cost too much for an artist, holding a pencil neatly in one hand—with a bright look to finish off with.

In the second picture you see her as she appeared later on, trimmed down for action, in the only costume that can "get out" art in the weather Heaven is sending us now. No curls—how comfy! No jammers—how cool! No jewelry—oh liberty! No socks oh joy! No slippers—free toes! No make up—huzzah! The elbows still stick—but art seems to be coming along better. NELL BRINKLEY.

Correct Manners

Betrothal Calls

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

I have been engaged to a young man since last Christmas, but my mother and the young man's mother have never met. Was it not his mother's place to call up my mother upon our engagement or else to have paid a call upon my mother? I have always thought that it was his mother's place to do one or the other immediately after our engagement was announced, and I would like your opinion on this subject, so that I will know definitely if my mother has been in error.

2—When one does call on the other, what is said and done, and so forth?

3—Is it a terrible breach of etiquette not to have made some acknowledgment to my mother?

S.

1—You are quite right in your point of view. The young man's mother should have come to call on you and your mother just as soon as she was told of the engagement by her son. This is a very important call . . . this "visit of welcoming into the family" . . . and so strict is etiquet on this that the rule requires that this visi. should be made by the mother and father of the fiance, or at least by his mother, within 24 hours. At all events, it should be made at the very earliest possible moment, and the call should be made in person if the young man's family lives near enough. The telephone call wouldn't be correct unless they live at a distance.

2—When the mother or mother and father come to see you and your mother, they tell how happy they are to meet her, and of their delight as being able to welcome you into their family, of their happiness about the engagement, and other felicitous and pleasant comments along this line. Naturally you talk of your fiance . . . with mutual appreciation and devotion! It would be natural, too, to speak of the approaching marriage, your plans, the probable date and the plans for your new home.

3—There is always the definite possibility that the fiance's family do not know or realize that this call is to be made, and that it is extremely important that it should be made as soon as possible; hence one hesitates to be too severe about it. But the fiance's family do have this definite social obligation.

Find Branching Bicycle Trails

My feet were on the ground, literally and figuratively, as, after climbing down from the driver's seat of the car, I handed Katie the revolver which Hugh had given me, and told her that I was going after my boys.

But Katie's tremulous voice halted me as I took my first step toward the tortuous woodland path down which Hugh Grantland and Jim had disappeared.

"Oh, Meesis Graham!" she wailed, but softly, so that no one save myself could hear her. "You gafe me your gun. Vere your gun? You must not go in dot dark place mit nuddings to fight mit."

"I'm not, Katie," I answered in a murmur which she only could hear. "I have a small revolver with me."

I could feel it against my palm as I spoke, the little revolver with a silencer attached, which Lillian gave me years ago, and which she insists upon my carrying whenever I am embarking upon any errand which has an element of danger in it.

SHOOT FIRST, KATIE ADVISES

"Oh!" Katie breathed a sigh of relief that seemed to come from her toes. "I feel lots better. Now you shoost remember—you see anyting foony, you shoost shoot revolver first. Ask questions anudder time."

"I'll remember," I told her, too tense for the silent laughter which I otherwise would have greeted this advice. "You're sure you won't be frightened?"

"Me?" she countered superbly. "I no 'fraid nuddings. Any gang mans koom monkeying round here, he going be so busy picking bullets out of hisself, he no time for devilment. Me, I going shoot first, talk next."

I halted in sudden alarm. This was the second time she had mentioned this drastic program, and I had a sudden vision of what dire consequences it might entail.

"You can't do that, Katie," I told her sharply. "You must be very careful. Suppose Mr. Hank, Mr. Bill, or Junior, or Roderick, or Major Grantland, or Jim came up hurriedly, and you began shooting first and asking questions afterward?"

Katie giggled—always her first reaction to anything out of the ordinary. Then she became indignant—her next reaction two times out of three.

"You tink I no have sense nuff to coom in oudt rain," she said accusingly. "You tink I shoot before I know who coom? Me, I got sharp eyes. I kin tell anny of our folks, vay off. But eef annybody no beesness round dees car coom oop, dey shoost better look oudt! First, I say 'Hands oop,' und I haf dem covered before I open mine moudt. So eef dey get fresh, eet vill be shoost too bad! Say, you better hurry eef you vant to find oudt vere Major Grantland und Jeem go."

TRACKS DIVIDE

"You are right, Katie," I said, and with a little prayer that no state trooper or local police officer would stop at the parked car to see why Katie was sitting there alone, I went along the winding, tangled path timorously cautiously, but with a determination that I knew nothing could shake.

For if the tracks of the bicycle tires told anything, they signified that somewhere in this strip of forest before me I should find my small son and his cousin, as well as Dicky's two older nephews.

Why they should have come here at this hour was an unfathomable mystery, but the fact remained that the tracks of their bicycle tires entered this path and did not come out again. Hugh and Jim had made sure of that before they left.

I would have trodden that path if it had been so fraught with danger that there seemed no escape anywhere, and if the thorny vines and uneven places in the path had been a hundred times more difficult. As it was, I had not progressed far along the trail before I felt my dress being caught and torn, and realized that the uneven footing of the trail, as I hurried along it in the dark, was taking toll of my injured ankle.

For one thing I was thankful. The dawn, ghostly but unmistakable, was at hand, and I was soon able to see my footing, also the tracks of the bicycle tires as well as the prints of Hugh's shoes and those of Jim evidently the only persons to come into the wood after the bicycle riders arrived.

Then suddenly I came to a division of the path, and saw that the bicycles had parted company.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Sunburn? Why will the dear-hearts expose themselves ruthlessly to strong sunlight? They know better, understand that it toughens and hardens the skin, causes it to lose its transparent quality, and fine texture.

Use buttermilk freely. After laving with that, tap in cold cream, place over the face a wash cloth that has been wrung out of ice-cold water. Use a boric talcum powder while cream remains on, forming a pack.

While freak diets and silly reducing methods are to be deplored, the fact remains that overweight is a burden, a blight on appearance and a menace to health. It should be fought tooth and nail.

If the plump one will keep clear of bonbons and pastries for a few weeks, she will lose her appetite for them. Fat girls insist they eat little or nothing—but what they do eat is the kind of food that develops into adipose tissue.

Parenthesis lines from nostrils to lip corners are the worry of many a woman. While they are caused by the bony structure of the face, they can be checked to a certain extent by massage.

Dip the thumb and first finger in a heavy cream, travel from the lower line upward in quick little nips and pinches. Iron the line crosswise, apply ice. Do this every night for a week, skip a week, start again.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Spoiled Food a Summer Menace

Health and long life depend on the eating of safe food. The so-called perishables cannot remain safe unless they are properly chilled. Yet for thousands of years man was without any really adequate way of preserving food.

Dr. Copeland

In olden times the Egyptians cooled their food by the evaporation of water. We learn that Nero had his slaves bring down from the mountainsides heaps of snow which he used to chill his wines. In the past, the coldness of caves and holes in the ground served to preserve foods.

In our grandmother's day, in the country, the cellar was the storehouse for the home-made butter, the pans of milk, and all perishable food. If they had a spring house, the milk and butter was kept there. I am sorry for the girls or boy who never had the fun of going down the steep stairs of grandfather's house to bring up some of the good things stored in the cellar.

Just how can food be kept in order that it may be guarded against spoilage and consequent poisoning? Certainly we all agree that the best cellars are inadequate as storage places for perishable food.

The perishables must be stored in such a way that they are never submitted to a temperature above 50 degrees. Several degrees lower than this mark will add a lot to their safety from deterioration. The figure 50 is not fixed by any arbitrary rule. It was arrived at after long study of the habits of the germs or bacteria of disease.

There is but one safe course to pursue. That is, to provide a means of refrigeration so well controlled that under no circumstances shall the temperature rise above 50 degrees.

There may be serious contamination of the food without any evidence that can be revealed by taste or smell. That makes it vital to be very sure the food is kept in such a way that growth of these poisonous germs will be impossible.

This certainly can be guaranteed. All you need do is to provide your family with a refrigerator that really refrigerates. It makes no difference whether it is made from wood or steel. It matters not how it is cooled, whether by ice, by gas or by electricity. But what does matter is this: Is your refrigerator capable of maintaining at all times a temperaure of 50 degrees or less? If no, it is a failure so far as the preservation of your food is concerned.

Recent years have shown remarkable progress in our knowledge of nutrition. We know more about the quantities and the kinds of food which are essential to normal growth, the repair of our tissues, and the maintenance of health. It used to be considered quite enough to know what foods were nutritious. That was largely a matter of individual opinion, but now it is a matter of scientific certainty. The research workers have solved most of the problems, certainly as they relate to the preservation of foods.

I beg of you to test your ice box or refrigerator. Use the thermometer and see what happens. If it does not conform to the standard, as I have said, it does not give you proper protection.

Answers to Health Queries

Mother. Q.—What foods are particularly suitable for children between the ages of 4 and 10 years? I cannot afford luxuries at this time, but want my children properly nourished.

A.—Simple foods are best for children between these ages. Each child should have at least a quart of milk a day in addition to the regular meals. For further particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

Trenton, N. J. Q.—What makes my heart beat as though it were a sledge hammer at times when I become excited or with little exertion on my part?

A.—A personal examination is necessary to diagnose any heart condition. Consult your family physician.

Contract Bridge :: HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

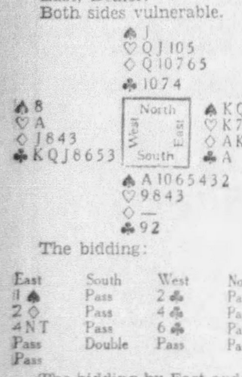
A Winning Slam Double

The Lead-Direct Double of a Slam bid has been discussed in these columns on numerous occasions. We all know the Double of a Slam contract by the partner of the Opening leader is made not in an effort to pick up a paltry additional 50 or 100 points, but is made in an attempt to direct the Opening lead. If the player who doubles has previously bid a suit, he is asking his partner not to open that suit. If there has been no bidding by the defending side, the Double commands an unnatural or unusual Opening. Sometimes the Double is made because the Doubler is void of a certain suit. At other times the Double is made because the Doubler has strength in one of the suits bid by Dummy, and a lead through that suit seems imperative. On still other occasions the Double is made to tell the Opening leader to open a singleton of his own because the player who has doubled has the Ace of trumps and can surely give him a ruff. Naturally, there are many occasions when the analytical ability of the partner of the Doubler is taxed to the utmost to decide just what Opening is desired.

Today's hand in a case in point.

East, Dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ◇	Pass	4 ♣	Pass
4 NT	Pass	6 ♣	Pass
Pass	Double	Pass	Pass
Pass

The bidding by East and West was more or less normal. Certainly the contract of six clubs should be made easily. At any rate, North was faced with the question of an Opening lead. After his partner's Double he immediately abandoned the idea of making the normal lead of the heart Queen, and he also decided against a trump Opening. This left the choice between a spade and a diamond. A spade lead would be made in the hope that South had doubled on the Ace of spades and could give North a ruff on the second round. The diamond lead would be made in an effort to give South a ruff, and South would be expected to have the second or setting trick in one of the other suits. After quite a bit of thought, the North player finally decided on the correct Opening—a diamond—whereupon his partner ruffed and cashed the Ace of spades for the setting trick.

His reasoning was as follows: East had opened the bidding with one spade and had never rebid the suit, and furthermore West had never supported it. What possible reason, therefore, could South have—holding a long spade suit headed by the Ace—to believe that North had a singleton and that West would have to follow to the suit twice? In other words, the mere possession of the spade Ace, even with a five, six or seven-card suit, would give South no reason to believe he could defeat the hand and no reason to try to command a spade Opening. Therefore, it would appear that South must have doubled because of a void in diamonds, and that a diamond lead would give him a first round ruff. It is true that East had bid diamonds only once and West had not supported that suit. However, the West player, who did not force on the first round, immediately became excited when his partner bid two diamonds, and jumped the bidding on the second round, thereby indicating some sort of diamond fit. With shortness in his partner's second suit, the West player would not suddenly become bullish on the hand and jump the bidding, North completed his reasoning by merely looking at his own length in diamonds, and decided that the other eight cards in the suit were divided either 5-3 or 4-4 in the opponents' hands.

It is easily seen that with any other Opening but a diamond, the contract would have been fulfilled as West's two losing diamonds could be discarded on a spade and a heart from Dummy, and the Ace of spades would be the only losing trick.

(Mrs. Culbertson will be very glad to answer questions on bridge. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, and address your question to Josephine Culbertson, in care of the Sun-Telegraph.)

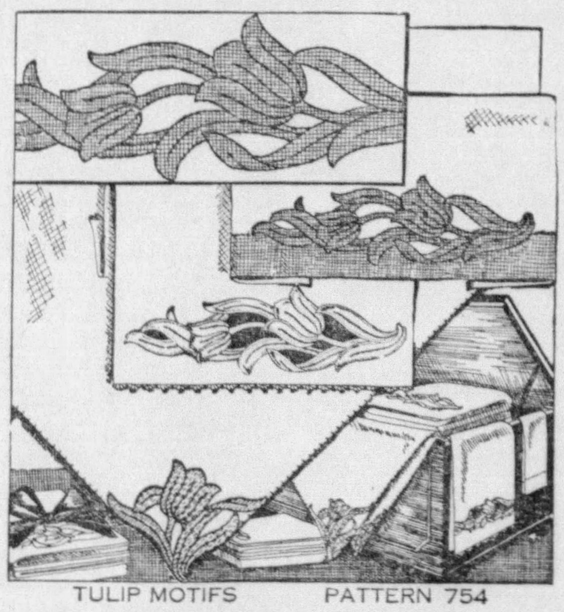
LAURA WHEELER DESIGNS



TULIP MOTIFS PATTERN 754

Tulips, always a decorative flower, are the inspiration for these motifs. Aside from lending themselves to cloths, scarfs, towels, and pillow cases, they also are practical embroidered in a variety of ways. The design is beautiful in cutwork done without bars. If it is color that is desired, the motifs, simple in outline, are lovely covered either with buttonhole or outline stitch. The openings that would be cut if doing cutwork are also done in this work, setting off the detail of the design most effectively. And then, whoever wants color and wishes to do very simple embroidery, can fill out the design in darning stitch, doing outline stitch around the design.

Pattern 754 comes to you with a transfer pattern of two 4x13-inch motifs, two and two reverse 5½-inch corners, two and two reverse 3¼-inch corners; illustrations of stitches used; instructions for doing cutwork and applique; and yardage requirements.

Send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) for this pattern to the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York, N. Y.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

Clothes cling to their prerogative of making a girl appear fragile and causing a young man to become romantic. Especially if the girl chooses a pale lemon yellow organdie frock made with a cascade of ruffles down the back of the skirt and around the short sleeves. Nice over taffeta and with a big hat of natural leghorn straw with flowers.

Compose a symphony of color in blue and white. For instance, a dark blue shirt of marocain with a shirtwaist of white marocain with a blue marocain bow. Then a loose coat of white surah, plaided in dark blue. Then a navy blue panama straw sailor.

Arm yourself with the delightful new chunky bracelets of glass flowers strung on elastic. The chunks are groups of tiny glass flowers with centers of red or blue. Also available in all white.

Fare forth in one of the new evening ensembles. One beautiful model has a trim little tailored blouse of white taffeta; a lovely matching taffeta cape and a floor-length skirt of white crepe. The result is startling but beautiful.

The net result of the season is the net. It is endorsed for daytime as well as for evening wear. A novel suit is of deep blue net, the coat with long, narrow revers of dark blue velvet and a wide matching velvet belt on the jacket.

LUCAS, WARNEKE CLASH IN SECOND PIRATE-CUB GAME

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Bucs Not Only Sufferers. Tough Day for Hurlers. Burlesque on Major Ball. | Meine to Start Later. Fastest Composite Mile. Stars in Swim Meet.

With Waite Hoyt failing as a starting pitcher, and Ralph Birkofer continuing the ineffective streak in which he has lost five games against a single victory since June 6, without hurling a complete contest in that time, Pittsburgh slabmen didn't look so hot yesterday in the opening number of the hard July trip. But they had plenty of company throughout the major leagues. Guy Bush and Van Mungo, in holding the Pirates and Giants to one and two runs, respectively, were notable exceptions in one of the toughest days big league flingers have experienced in a long time.

Ralph Birkofer

Even with one affair cut to five innings, the eight games in the two loops produced the ridiculous total of 143 runs, of which 83 were scored in the National and 60 in the American. Hits for the afternoon totaled 197. Scores of 16 to 15, 16 to 13, and 18 to 6 stood out in the burlesque on major league baseball. The game between the Braves and Phils saw the two clubs making 29 runs and 41 hits. The Cards and Reds rolled up 31 runs and the same number of hits, the Cards using no fewer than seven pitchers. If the gents who voted for the lively ball had that sort of stuff in mind, they must have had a queer idea of popular taste or of what the public expects to see on major league fields. Sandlot clubs would be ashamed of such exhibitions.

COUNTING ON MEINE FOR STRONG FINISH

The fact that Heinie Meine has been sent to the mound only in relief roles since his start against the Braves on June 22 does not mean that Manager Pie Traynor has lost any of his confidence in the veteran right-hander as a starting pitcher. On the contrary, Pie has as much faith as ever in Meine, whom he considers one of the smartest and most dependable hurlers on the staff when in stride. But Heinie was weakened by an attack of illness that kept him out of action for 17 days in May, and it is Traynor's plan to use him sparingly until he has fully recovered his strength and have him in a good stride for regular starting duty later.

Meine has made an excellent showing as a rescue flinger. In three relief engagements against three different clubs he has pitched seven and two-third innings without being scored on, allowing a total of only five hits. Manager Traynor believes that giving Heinie as much rest as possible now will prove the best and quickest method of putting him in form.

GEHRINGER RATED BEST IN HIS LEAGUE

Above Babe Ruth, Joe Cronin, Lou Gehrig, Jimmy Foxx, Al Simmons and all others who may be mentioned, Goose Goslin rates Charley Gehringer as the most valuable player in the American League. Goslin goes so far as to term Gehringer the greatest player he ever saw in any league. In the Goose's estimation, the Detroit second baseman comes as close as any player ever came to being faultless. Goslin calls Gehringer the greatest fielder at any position in baseball today; a great hitter; a fine baserunner; and an exceptional team player who will at any time sacrifice his own vantage to help win a game.

Charley Gehringer

Goslin is not alone in giving Gehringer such a high ranking. Bucky Harris, Red Sox pilot, who formerly managed the Tigers, says he had an excellent opportunity to study Gehringer closely and picks him over any other player who could be named as the ideal man on a ball club. Gehringer lacks aggressiveness, but Harris declares he is so overwhelmingly good in every other way that you can't hold that against him.

COMPOSITE MILE NEAR FOUR MINUTES

In connection with the discussion as to whether or not the four-minute mile by a human runner is an attainable goal, a statistician figures that it could be approached closely by hooking up the fastest quarters ever run outdoors in mile races completed under 4 minutes and 15 seconds. He thinks that approximates the ultimate in human speed and stamina. The selection for the first quarter is Norman Taber's 58 seconds, made in a 4:12.6 mile; second quarter, Jack Lovelock's 6:2.2 seconds, made in a 4:07.6 mile; third quarter, Glenn Cunningham's 61.8 seconds, made in a 4:06.7 mile, the present world record; fourth quarter, John Paul Jones' 58.2 seconds, made in a 4:14.4 mile.

Added up, these best quarterly times give a composite mile in 4:00.2, just two-tenths of a second above the four-minute mark. It's easy on paper, but probably some little time will elapse before they are hooked together in a single runner. Paavo Nurmi came closer than any runner to the pace required for a four-minute mile. He ran the fastest first half in 2:01.8, and the fastest three-quarters in 3:06.7, but faded in the final 440 yards. To beat the present record it will be necessary for a strong finisher like Cunningham or Bonthron to follow Nurmi's schedule for the first three-quarters and then unleash a kick for a terrific finish.

SWIM STARS IN CONNEAUT LAKE MEET

One of the most attractive swimming meets on the summer outdoor program, including two Allegheny Mountain Association free-style championship events, is scheduled for Saturday afternoon, July 21, at Conneaut Lake, open to all registered amateur natators in the A. M. A. district, and with no entry fee charged. The cream of the district's talent in both the men's and women's divisions will be in the competing field, including Miss Lenore Kight, of Homestead, national A. A. U. champion, who has entered for the 220-yard free-style championship, the 100-meter scratch race and the 100-meter handicap. Among her opponents in the championship number will be Misses Margaret Salata and Rita Heil, of the Duquesne Library Dolphins.

Lenore Kight

Entrants from this section for the 440-yard free-style championship for men include Russell Lindberg, of the Homestead Library Club, and P. M. Choate, Harry McGuire, William Segady and Zoltan Lupes, of the Duquesne Dolphins. These two clubs also will send a large number of swimmers to compete in the other events, as will the Pittsburgh Aquatic Club and the Willows Swimming Club. In addition to the championship contests there will be six other swimming events, two low-board diving numbers and a canoe-tilting feature. The swimming contests will be decided over a 110-yard course.

CHICAGO, July 7.—Losers in six of their nine battles with the Cubs this year, the Pirates today were not feeling like potential champs, especially in the face of their activities of yesterday when they bowed in their latest setback at the hands of Charley Grimm's club. The score was 9-1.

The second clash of the four-game series is on for this afternoon and there was nothing much to cheer the Buccos as the battle impends, for Manager Grimm is expected to send Lonnie Warneke, his ace of aces, to the mound. The Pittsburghers will go to work behind Red Lucas.

The present series will be closed tomorrow with a manufactured doubleheader. The dual contest was made possible by moving back the game originally slated for Thursday.

BUSH FOOLS ROVERS

Even if Warneke is at his peak today he is not apt to give a much better performance than that offered by Guy Bush yesterday. Pitted against Waite Hoyt, who was starting his first game of the season for the Rovers, Mississippi Abe held the Pirates to five hits, one of which was a homer by Gus Suhr.

Hoyt had been rendering such fine service in the relief role this year that Manager Traynor felt constrained to give the veteran a chance to open a contest, but the move did not work out well for the Buccos, who saw their relief star socked for nine hits and six runs in less than five innings.

Apparently it was Hoyt's misfortune to find the Bruins in a mood for hitting. In any event, the home batters were not slowed down to any appreciable extent as Southpaw Ralph Birkhofer went to the slab to relieve the veteran righthander. The Cubs solved Birky for eight hits and three runs in the remaining frames.

Suhr's homer in the second was the first run of the contest. The Cubs evened things up in their half when Hartnett scored on his hit, a single by Grimm, a pass and a ground ball which resulted in a double play.

The Bruins broke the deadlock in the fourth which Cuyler opened with a double. A sacrifice and Grimm's single scored Kiki.

CUBS CHASE HOYT

The Bears put the game away in the fifth as they rushed six runs over the plate. Herman started with a single and he stole as English fanned. Billy went to third on a wild pitch and Klein walked. Stainback's single scored the second baseman, Klein taking third.

Cuyler fanned but Hartnett singled to score Klein, Stainback taking third. Birkofer relieved Hoyt and Grimm greeted him with a fluke hit to score Stainback. Birkofer tried to make a play on Grimm's tap and threw wide, Hartnett and Grimm each advancing a base.

Hack filled the bases with a pass and the whole parade of runners tallied when Bush walloped a double to right. Singles by Stainback, Cuyler and Hartnett in the sixth gave the Cubs their ninth run.

Manager Traynor, Arky Vaughan and Paul Waner yesterday were notified officially of their selection as members of the all-star National League club which will meet the stars of the American League Tuesday at the Polo Grounds, New York.

Outfielder Fred Lindstrom worked with his mates, but his injured hand is in very bad shape.

Books Sets Pace In City League

Immaculate Heart defeated the Homewood club, 11 to 7, last night in a City League contest played at Homewood. The Dormont-Mt. Lebanon club won a 5-2 decision from Mt. Oliver and the Books triumphed over Parmelee, 8 to 3.

The Books are leading the last-half race with two victories and no defeats.

ROONEY SELECTS CAMP

President Art Rooney, of the Pittsburgh Pirates, of the National Professional Football League, announced yesterday his club would begin training August 26 at Mt. Pleasant. The Pittsburgh players will use the Mt. Pleasant High School Field for their workouts.

NICKY SPINE MAKES GOOD

By GEORGE SHRADLE

Pittsburgh has a young jockey protege on the race tracks for whom a fine riding future is predicted.

He is known to thousands, not alone Pittsburghers, but business and professional men from throughout the country, who made his acquaintance in convention and business sessions during a three-year period at the William Penn Hotel, where the young apprentice served as a popular page boy.

This lad for whom success is predicted is Nick Spine, son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Spine, of 1401 Woodward avenue, McKees Rocks. He is starting his career from the stables of a Pittsburgher, Theodore E. Mueller, vice president of the Standard Sanitary Manufacturing Company, at Shady Brook Farm, Louisville, Ky.

MAKES GOOD START

Nick has ridden eight races at Latonia, Ky., since May 28. Chauvenet was his first winning mount. His record to date includes one victory, two seconds and two thirds for Owner Mueller. Riding on outside mounts, Nick came in second once and was out of the money in another race. Mueller, in a letter to Edward J. Ruch, assistant manager of the William Penn Hotel, writes of Spine:

"His showing to date has been most satisfactory, and when they start at Dade Park we expect him to ride some other horses. His services, no doubt, will be in demand by other owners.

"He gives every indication of developing into a first-class rider and is one of the best prospects that has shown up for some time."

CHERISHED AMBITION

Nick cherished the idea of becoming a jockey for years. While a page boy, his off-time from the hotel was spent at Schenley Oval to get acquainted with the handling of horses. Friends told him they would speak to Mueller to get him a start. Nick became impatient and last summer took all of his savings to journey to Louisville to see the manufacturer. Mueller was not there at the time, so Nick hitch-hiked back to Pittsburgh and worked again as a page boy to raise enough money to get to Arlington Park in Chicago. There he became acquainted with Mueller's trainer, James Moody, who took him under his care.

HARRY WALD . . . . . SEEKS PUBLIC PARKS TENNIS TITLE

Wald, former Pitt star, is one of the entrants in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's public parks tennis tournament, which gets under way one week from next Monday. Winners will be sent to the national tournament. This is a Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph picture.

GRAYS' GAME CANCELED

The Havana Stars have disbanded for the season, according to word received by Manager Posey, of the Homestead Grays last night. Consequently the four-game series between the Grays and Stars which was to have opened at Greenlee Field this afternoon has been cancelled. The Grays will play an all-star club at Toledo tomorrow.

COBB TEAMATE DIES

ATLANTA, Ga., July 7.—(INS.)—Ray Francis, famous pitcher of the golden era of baseball, in recent years a member of the Atlanta police force, dropped dead on duty yesterday. Francis succumbed to a heart attack. He was a renowned southpaw on the famous Detroit American League team on which Ty Cobb, the Georgia Peach, starred for many years.

NETTERS ENTER PARKS PLAY

With less than a week remaining in which to file entries for the annual Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Pittsburgh Parks tennis championships, names of prospective contestants are beginning to rise toward an imposing total. The fact that this year for the first time there exists opportunity for racqueters from beyond the city limits to compete for municipal honors is inducing a host of new contenders to try their skill in quest of the Sun-Telegraph challenge trophies, 30 or more permanent prizes, and the trips to the National Public Parks championships at Minneapolis next month —special rewards for the men's and women's singles victors.

Players who have filled in blanks with Riverview designated as their home ballwick are requested to communicate with the tournament chairman at once and to inform him of their choice of battle-sites under the current program. Riverview aspirants who fail to instruct the chairman otherwise will be automatically enlisted under the North Park banner.

The entry rosters will remain open till next Friday evening.

W. VA. AND OHIO RACERS ENTER

Two more district stars have entered the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's big outboard motorboat regatta to be held in conjunction with the Oakmont Boat Club at Oakmont one week from today and tomorrow.

The latest entrants are R. J. Elder, of Dayton, O., who will be a strong bidder for the beautiful William Randolph Hearst Gold Cup, which will go to the amateur who scores the most points, and Leech Cracraft, of Wheeling, W. Va. Elder is entered in all amateur classes with his Wits End craft. Cracraft is a professional. He will drive his Modernistic Rhythm in the B, C and F classes.

The officials will hold a rehearsal at the Oakmont Boat Club tomorrow afternoon to perfect themselves in their duties. Starts and finishes will be checked and the equipment tested.

Babe Ruth, New York, right field.
Lou Gehrig, New York, first base.
Frank Higgins, Philadelphia, third base.
Al Simmons, Chicago, center field.
Joe Cronin, Washington, shortstop.
Bill Dickey, New York, catcher.
Vernon Gomez, New York, pitcher.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Frank Frisch, St. Louis, second base.
Harold Traynor, Pittsburgh, third base.
Joe Medwick, St. Louis, or Chuck Klein, Chicago, left field.
Hazen Cuyler, Chicago, or Mel Ott, New York, right field.
Wally Berger, Boston, center field.
Bill Terry, New York, first base.
Travis Jackson, New York, shortstop.
Gabby Hartnett, Chicago, or Al Lopez, Brooklyn, catcher.
Carl Hubbell, New York, pitcher.

NEW YORK, July 7.—(AP.)—Nominated in advance by popular acclaim, Vernon Gomez and Carl Hubbell were definitely selected today as starting pitchers for the all-star game between the American and National leagues at the Polo Grounds next Tuesday.

Obeying the people's mandate as indicated by the recent nation-wide poll, Joe Cronin, the American League's shortstop-manager, and Bill Terry, first baseman and master-mind of the National League forces, picked the two crack southpaws for starting duty and thereby assured a pitching natural for which the baseball world has been waiting for several years.

Gomez and Hubbell, generally ranked as the two finest portsiders in the game, polled by far the greatest number of votes among the pitchers chosen for the two all-star teams.

Announcement of their selection by the two managers was made coincident with the official batting orders for both teams. Cronin has decided to start with a lineup topped off by four of the greatest left-handed hitters in baseball, while Terry, although he named alternates for three positions, nevertheless plans to fire eight righthanded clouters at Gomez.

LIKES RIGHTHANDERS

Terry explained he had named Klein and Ott as possible starting outfielders in the event a left-hander did not open for the American Leaguers. He likewise added he had not yet made up his mind as to whether Hartnett or Lopez would start behind the plate, although it was indicated the Cub veteran would get the call.

If both Klein and Ott are left on the bench the National Leaguers will have eight right-handed batsmen, Terry alone swinging from the port side. Frisch, who was honored with the captaincy of the team, is a turn batter, hitting right-handed against southpaws, and left-handed against the orthodox pitchers. Both Lopez and Hartnett bat right-handed.

After Hubbell, Terry named Lon Warneke, of the Cubs; Dizzy Dean, of the Cardinals; Van Mungo, of the Dodgers, and Fred Frankhouse, of the Braves, in that order as his pitching selections.

MANY TICKETS SOLD

Cronin's starting lineup shows six left-handed batters and three right—Higgins, Simmons and Cronin himself.

More than 30,000 of the total of 53,602 seats at the Polo Grounds so far have been sold for the all-star game, which has taken its place as baseball's biggest one-day show. The box seats, at $2.60 each, and choicer grandstand reserved sections, at $1.65 per seat, have been sold out, but there still are unsold approximately 15,000 of the 40,000 reserved grandstand seats, priced at $1.10 each. The bleacher section, holding 4,000 customers, at the regular rate of 55 cents each, will go on sale the day of the game. The proceeds go to the Ball Players' Benevolent Fund.

National League umpires assigned to the game are Charles Pfirman and Albert (Dolly) Stark.

The game is scheduled for 12:30 p. m. (eastern standard time). If it rains, the game will be played Wednesday morning.

Junior League Picked To Win All-Star Tilt

ST. LOUIS, July 7.—(INS.)—The American League All-Stars are 7 to 10 favorites to win from the National League All-Stars in the game at New York next Tuesday.

Even money is offered on the National Leaguers.

These odds were posted today by Tom Kearney, St. Louis betting commissioner. Said Kearney:

"I figure that Gomez will pitch for the American League team and Hubbell for the Nationals. The Americans went to the post favorite last year and won. I figure they'll do it again this year."

Kearney also volunteered that he believes the world series this season will be staged in New York between the Giants and the Yankees.

MISS KIGHT AT CARNIVAL

Miss Lenore Kight, world champion free-style swimmer, is one of the feature entrants at the water carnival being held this afternoon at Rock Bottom Beach, Edgewood.

MEMORY TEST

TODAY'S QUESTIONS

How good is your memory of sports events, heroes and dates? Can you answer these questions?

1—How many batters did Dizzy Dean strike out to set a new major league record last year?

2—What was the nature of the injury which forced Mrs. Helen Wills Moody out of tennis competition?

3—To whom did Mrs. Moody default in the final of the national tournament last year?

4—Who was the finalist against Gene Sarazen in the P. G. A. tournament last year?

5—What was Johnny Fischer's all-time record qualifying score in the national amateur tournament last year?

(Answers in Want Ad section Monday. See today's Want Ad section for answers to yesterday's questions.)

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: A HUMAN SLATE—Mrs. Rosa Barthelme, of Wichita, Kan., whose skin is lithographic, now appears in the Believe It or Not Odditorium at the World Fair in Chicago. An artist draws a picture or prints a short message on her back or her arms with a match or toothpick. Either becomes visible on her skin in a few minutes in the form of a raised welt. This is due to a rare and peculiarly sensitive type of skin. The operation is neither painful nor harmful. First there is a faint white line, then there is a welt, and after a few minutes the writing disappears completely. Mrs. Barthelme cannot explain the condition of her skin and neither can the doctors whom she has consulted. TAXPAYER NO. 1—Fred Zuehlke, of Davenport, Wash., has a unique record for prompt payment of taxes which has caused him no small amount of trouble to maintain for 38 years. In 1896, he received Lincoln County tax receipt No. 1 and every year since then he has been the first to appear at the treasurer's office in order to get the No. 1 tax receipt.

TOMORROW: KING BEFORE BIRTH.

PERRY REJECTS PRO OFFER

NEW YORK, July 7.—(AP.)—Bill O'Brien, sports promoter, announces he has cabled an offer of $25,000 to Fred Perry, newly crowned all-England tennis champion, if he will make a professional tour of the United States next year.

The offer, O'Brien said, not only included a $25,000 guarantee, but the privilege of taking 25 per cent of the gate receipts. The tour, in which Bill Tilden, Ellsworth Vines and one other pro would participate, would last four months.

OFFER DECLINED

WIMBLEDON, England, June 7.—(AP.)—Frederick John Perry, 25-year-old English star, who yesterday won the all-England tennis title, today told the Associated Press he was "not interested" in an offer of $25,000 and a share of the gate receipts to turn professional and tour the United States.

The offer was made by Bill O'Brien, associated with Big Bill Tilden in the promotion of professional tennis tournaments and exhibitions in the States. Perry said:

"This is all very good, but I have a very promising position in a brokerage house and I look forward to playing a lot more amateur tennis."

U. S. Sculler Loses In Henley Final

HENLEY-ON-THAMES, England, July 7.—(AP.)—Dr. Herbert Buhtz, of Berlin, today won the diamond sculls, defeating Winthroph (Bill) Rutherfund, former Princeton varsity oarsman, by three and a half lengths in 8 minutes 10 seconds to tie the record for the mile, 550 yards, set by F. S. Kelly in 1905.

Parker Meets Bridge In Net Semi-Finals

CHICAGO, July 7.—(AP.)—Frankie Parker, youthful Milwaukee tennis ace and defending champion, reached the semi-finals of the national clay court championships at the Chicago Town and Tennis Club yesterday after a battle that went four sets against Robert (Lefty) Bryan, of Chattanooga. The scores were 3-6, 6-0, 6-3, 7-5.

By virtue of his victory over Bryan, Parker will meet Donald Budge, of Oakland, Cal., today. Budge advanced to the semi-finals Thursday by whipping Jack Tidball, of Los Angeles, former intercollegiate titleholder, in four sets.

Gene Mako, of Los Angeles, the intercollegiate champion, staged a rally to conquer Henry Prusoff, the Seattle (Wash.) giant, in a five-setter which required more than two hours of battling. Prusoff won the first two sets, 9-11, 5-7, but used himself up and was unable to withstand Mako's finish. The Californian won the last three sets, 6-0, 6-1, 9-7, and will meet Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, of Atlanta, Ga., today in the semi-finals.

Fight Results

At Hollywood, Cal.—Tony Herrera defeated Pancho Villa, 10 rounds.

At Atlantic—Joe Knight defeated Rosy Rosales, 10 rounds.

San Diego, Cal.—Carmen Barth knocked out Johnny Banus, 1 round.

Fort Worth, Tex.—Babe Hunt won by technical knockout over Jack Van Noy.

MUSHERS SEEK GAMES

The Sixth Ward Progressive Club of McKeesport mushball team, which boasts a record of 46 victories in 49 games, would like to arrange additional games. Write Joe Dubranski, 905 Soles street, McKeesport.

BLOCK WINNER IN W. VA. GOLF

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., July 7.—(AP.)—Upon the brows of young Tom Bloch and Miss Fritzie Stifel, both of Wheeling, rest the crowns of king and queen of West Virginia's amateur golfdom.

It was the fifth time that Miss Stifel has donned the laurels and the first for Bloch.

Mrs. H. D. Everett, of Charleston, won only one hole, although halving several, as Miss Stifel toppled her, 4 and 3, in the final stage of her march to the throne yesterday.

Mrs. E. W. Stifel, mother of Fritzie and last year's runner-up, won the championship of the second flight, defeating Mrs. Philip Cochran, of Morgantown, 5 and 3.

Bloch scored a crushing 9 and 8 victory over Fred Tannerot, Jr., of Charleston, twice the men's titleholder.

A. J. Chapman, of Wheeling, is the new ruler of the state's professional golfers. He turned in a 148 to win the annual 36-hole professional golf tourney, held in connection with the men's and women's amateur contests.

Engineers Defeat Koppers in Tourney

The U. S. Engineers handed the Koppers Coal team its first setback in Bracket I of the senior class, 15 to 12, in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's Western Pennsylvania amateur softball tournament on the Schenley Oval No. 2 field yesterday.

After trailing for three innings, the Gabbel Cycles, of New Kensington, made a strong comeback and nosed ou the Younks Newsies, 8 to 7, in an intermediate division contest. It was Shortstop Justham's homer that clinched the game for the Cycles in the last half of the eighth inning.

John Zywan's five-hit pitching enabled the Elwyn A. C. to defeat the Overbrook Independents, 7-1, in a Bracket V game of the senior class. This marked the victors' third straight win in tournament play.

PARK GOLFERS TUNE UP FOR TITLE EVENT

By TOM BIRKS

The cream of the players from Schenley Park, North Park and South Park will wend their way over the South Park course this afternoon and tomorrow in the last windup, before the 36-hole qualifying test of the National Public Links tournament Tuesday. Yesterday Alex Shacoski, North Park champion; Carl Kauffmann, three times National Public Links champion, and Francis Lally, the city champion, matched their shots against South Park's long par.

Kauffmann is playing good golf, and it appears that the Schenley sphinx will be the standard bearer of this district, when the National event gets under way.

In preparation for the Pennsylvania State Open championship, scheduled at Oakmont July 19 and 20, Vincent Eldred, Ted Luther and Emil Loeffler engaged in a threesome yesterday afternoon at Oakmont. Perry Del Vecchio was scheduled to team up with Loeffler, but a fire cracker exploded a little prematurely and Perry has a bad hand.

Ted Luther finished with a 74, while Eldred and Dutch had a 75, which indicates the locals are going to be tough to beat. Luther played brilliant golf, going out with a 36, one under par. Emil came home in 36, one over regulation figures. Dutch started with two birdies, but lost his approach shot on the third and fourth holes.

Eldred and Luther will play in the Summit Open tourney at Uniontown on Monday, and this will serve to get them on edge for the State Open. Sam Parks, Jr., is considering going to St. Paul for the $10,000 Open, but Eldred and Luther are passing it up. Eldred won the State Open at Oakmont two years ago, and wants to repeat.

The Traffic Club expects about 200 players at its tournament, scheduled at the Edgewood Country Club next Thursday.

MEDICA BREAKS SWIM RECORDS

CHICAGO, July 7.—(AP.)—Jack Medica, America's foremost hope in the campaign to break Japan's hold on swimming honors in the 1936 Olympic games, was after his second world record in two days today in the National A. A. U. championship meet in the World Fair's north lagoon.

The human torpedo from the Washington A. C., of Seattle, Wash., gave a thrilling display of speed swimming in breaking Arne Borg's five-year-old record for one mile. He won by about 100 yards over his chief rival, Ralph Flanagan, of Miami, Fla., in 20:57.8. The Swedish star's accepted mark was 21:06.8.

Medica was after a new mark in the 440-yard free style today, to give a claim to eight world records. Four already have been approved, while three are pending.

Another youngster, 18-year-old Jimmy Higgins, of the Olneyville Boys' Club, Providence, R. I., came up with a record yesterday. He won the 220-yard breast stroke in 2:55, one and two-tenths seconds better than the approved American mark held by Walter Spence, of New York.

Trials and finals in the 440-yard swim, the 100-meter backstroke and the 880-yard relay were on today's program.

MID-ATLANTIC RACE CLOSE

Another defeat suffered yesterday by Dayton at the hands of the Springfield club prevented the Dayton boys from copping the first-half flag race in the Mid-Atlantic League. Beckley, runner-up club of the competition, still remains in the chase. The Johnston club was twice defeated by Wheeling in a dual bill, Charleston taking a single contest from Huntington.

The McKeesport club went to Washington where it delivered a setback to the Washington pacesetters of the Pennsylvania State League. Charleroi trimmed the Monessen team, while Jeanneatte won over Greensburg.

Elmer M. Daily, president of the Penn State circuit, as well as of the Mid-Atlantic League, announced last night the first half of the season of the Pennsylvania State League would close with tomorrow's games.

Greenlee Field Fights Postponed

The opening show of Jules Beck's and Lew Raymond's new boxing club at Greenlee Field has been set back one week from next Thursday night until the following Thursday, it was announced today.

Joey Costa, of New York, who is to meet Eddie Zivic in a return bout in the 10-round windup, suffered a bruised knuckle and asked for the postponement.

The card has been completed with the following additional bouts:

Mose Butch vs. Jackie Wilson, 10 rounds, and Harry Krause vs. Bill Eley and Casey Rhodes vs. Mike Bazzone, 6 rounds each.

Postponement of this show reduces next week's district card to two shows, the all-star card at Hickey Park Monday night headed by Dominic Mancini and Harry Weekly and the Tiger Joe Randall-Eddie (Kid) Wolfe benefit show at Monessen on Friday.

Honus Says:

By HONUS WAGNER,
Former Star, Now Coach at Pirates.

To the Sports Editor:

The other day a fan said to me, "Do you ever wish you could go up to the plate in a game and take a cut at the ball?" That question has been asked many times. Of course, I do. Anybody would have something wrong with him if he didn't feel that way now and then. Of course, I know my playing days were over long ago, so I'm not unhappy about it. Sometimes when I say I wish I were up, the Pirate who is at bat smacks out a triple and I think well, maybe it was good I wasn't up there. The heart is willing, but baseball is a game of youth.

BATTERS POUND LIVELY BALL

Associated Press.

Major league pitchers hereafter will have a "Black Friday" all their own to observe with appropriate ceremonies.

Thirty-nine pitchers, 24 in the National and 15 in the American, faced the batters in eight games yesterday with the following disastrous results:

League.	R.	H.	2B.	3B.	HR.	TB.	BB.
National	83	118	30	4	10	186	32
American	60	79	18	6	3	118	41
Grand total	143	197	48	10	13	304	74

Two of the dizziest games on record combined to send the National League slugging figures up into the realm of higher mathematics. In one of them, the Cincinnati Reds outlasted the St. Louis Cardinals, 16 to 15. In the other, the Boston Braves "nosed out" the Phillies, 16-13.

The Cardinals sent seven pitchers, or everybody but Paul Dean and Bill Hallahan, to the mound in an effort to salvage the game with the Reds, but all to no avail.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

Among other items not generally known is the one about Mrs. Roosevelt . . . Last year, she took a homeless young man into her home on 65th street in New York City—for the night . . . He had asked her for money in an upstate town while she was on one of those solo drives of hers . . . The following day she got him a job on some federal relief project . . . Everyone thought she was crazy to pick up a total stranger, and get him a job, but she must be a good judge of character . . . For in the year this chap has risen to be boss of a big federal public works job, with about 500 men under him . . . Her judgment certainly has been vindicated.

The news that fell on these willing ears was that Johnny Broderick, one of the better guardians, had been reinstated as first-grade detective by Commissioner O'Ryan . . . At the time of Broderick's demotion to a village beat in uniform, many of us felt that a wrong had been done—for political reasons . . . This pillar, frinstance, telephoned the Commissioner . . . "Please," we said, "don't think this is butting in, but the only people who will be happy over Broderick's demotion will be those who are afraid of him—the outlaws. And if I were Police Commissioner, sir, and I wanted a bodyguard, it would be Broderick" . . . The Commissioner was courteous, and he said that Broderick would be reinstated in time, if he proved himself worthy . . . And now Johnny is back, for which dozens of hurrahs! . . . That's the nice part of being in trouble, though, as he must have learned . . . You find out which of your friends are!

How true it is, I do not know . . . It concerns Ernest Hemingway, and around the newspaper where he once struggled for recognition—it is a legend . . . When Hemingway was merely another reporter on that staff, he prepared a story sympathizing with some strikers . . . The gazette refused to publish it . . . So Hemingway decided to quit . . . But he wanted to register his opinion for all to see—so he sat down and batted out a column stating bluntly what he thought of his managing editor, the news editor and the publisher . . . He didn't mince wordage, as you can well imagine . . . That column now would probably be worth about $1 per word. . . . He took the column into the composing room and persuaded one of the boys to set it for him . . . Then he had a dozen or so proofs pulled of it . . . One he sent into the managing editor as his official resignation, another he delivered to the publisher with a flourish . . . Another he tacked up on the editorial room bulletin board for all the staff to see, and so on . . . Then he strolled out. . . .

I can smell it all the way from Los Angeles . . . I mean the incident in N. Y. . . . Raymond Million is his name—a terrible name for a jobless man . . . A group of sweltering kids in the record New York heat the other day begged him to use his muscles and turn on the water from a street fire hydrant . . . Which he did—and they frolicked as the cool aqua showered them . . . The mothers and fathers of those children would have pinned a medal on him, if they had a medal, that is . . . So what happened? . . . So Mr. Million was arrested for opening a fire hydrant without permission, and in night court he said: "Your Honor, it was awful hot, and the kids looked so pitiful. They enjoyed the water so much, Your Honor" . . . So His Honor, as some judges are called (but why, I don't know) replied sternly: "I find you guilty. Two dollars or two days!" . . . And the kids' friend had to go to jail! . . . for which fooey! . . . Let us say that the law must be respected. Okay . . . But if he were a human being he would have carried out the law—and he would have paid the two bucks himself! . . . Which is what I will do—when and if, I'm ever the F. D. R. of a court.

Thumbnail descriptions: Clark Gable: The guy in the hair tonic ads . . . F. P. A.: A. B. P. O. E. watch fob . . . Duke Ellington: Mumbo-Jumbo goes to Harvard . . . Percy Hammond: A water buffalo . . . Greta Garbo: A five-alarm fire in an ice box . . . Marilyn Miller: Alice in Wonderland—20 years after . . . Geo. Arliss: Any orang-outang with a monocle . . . Joan Crawford: A movie star . . . Mae Murray: Stale champagne . . . Joan Blondell: The Childs waitress who gets the biggest tips . . . Dorothy Parker: Carbolic acid in a perfume bottle . . . Hot From Hollywood

By JIMMY STARR

HOLLYWOOD, July 7.—Hello! Perhaps censorship had something to do with it, but, on second thought, Charley Grapewin's book, "The Town Pump," had that rare, honey-like quality that prompted cinema production. Anyway, Lou Ostrow and Charley (you remember him when he was so grand in "The Night of June 13" as the grand-pappy) have formed a producing unit known as the "O-G" Pictures. Naturally, Charley will star in his own ditty, and Universal will do the releasing, by cracky!

Josephine Hutchinson's first day in pictures was the kind of day several million girls probably dream about—she spent it kissing Dick Powell!

It was the first day of the actual shooting of Mervyn Leroy's new film. He was nervous, Josie was shy, and Dick was enjoying himself—immensely!

* * *

Blvd. Buzzings—Mack Gordon, the largest song writer, did a fan dance at the Ambassador's Lido that had everybody chattering! . . .

This is more than a giggle—a lovely Russian dancer, seeking a test at RKO, arrived with two Russian wolfhounds, her press agent, a maid and her manager. The test was made, despite this parade—and the dogs got the job!

Some years ago (perhaps a dozen, if you're interested) when I was Joe Schenck's office boy, the Norma Talmadge unit had a property man by the name of Count Phil d'Esco. I laughed at the "Count" in such a lowly position—but he had papers of proof, so I stopped giggling.

The other day I met him on Hollywood boulevard. He presented his card. It read: Phil d'Esco, chief of service, Paramount Studios, Paris.

Phil quickly explained the absence of his title. "There are too many over there. One must be individual!"

And so to wander on down the boulevard.

Lindy Flies On Screen

Col. Lindberg takes to the air again and is seen in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News as he pilots the giant Sikorsky transport plane, Brazilian Clipper, on its final test off Bridgeport, Conn. With 30 other persons aboard, the great ship attains a speed of 190 miles an hour, faster than any ship of its type ever traveled before. The Globe Trotter describes the trip.

A crowd of more than half a million persons, packed on the sands of Coney Island, is shown. At the World's Fair in Chicago crowds are kept cool at the side of a frozen lake.

Prince Albert of Leige, infant son of Belgium's King and Queen, is christened in Brussels.

John D. Rockefeller is seen and heard on his 95th birthday at Lakewood, N. J.

Off the English coast, Admiral Jellicoe's famous World War flagship, the Iron Duke, takes part in battle practice.

Joseph P. Kennedy, Wall street's new "boss," outlines his plans as head of President Roosevelt's Securities Commission.

President Lebrun and other notables of France are included in the tremendous crowd of 200,000 that jams the Longchamps track in Paris for the Grand Prix, won by Admiral Drake.

Society senoritas at Madrid, Spain, make a try at bullfighting with exciting but not highly successful results.

Thrilling scenes along the waterfront in San Francisco show the police in hand-to-hand conflict with dock strikers.

Note—Owing to the necessity upon theater managers to arrange programs in time schedules, it is possible some of the subjects of Hearst Metrotone News may not be shown in your theater.

North Side House Reopening Today

Remodeled, redecorated and reseated, the William Penn Theater, Federal street, North Side, is reopening today under the management of the Harris Amusement Company. Previous to the closing of the theater two weeks ago, the house was operated by Warner Brothers, who succeeded the Harris firm as operators of the theater approximately three years ago.

Today's opening program includes "The Lost Patrol," starring Victor McLaglen and Boris Karloff, and pictures of the recent Max Baer and Primo Carnera bout.

New Outdoor Act In Kennywood

Bobby Fisher's Fearless Flyers, a thrill act, will open in Kennywood tomorrow. In it three daring young men on the flying trapeze and one pretty girl throw one another around 100 feet in the air. The climax of the act comes when Bobby Fisher does a double somersault, blindfolded. Cimse's motorcycle thriller will show for the last time tonight. Barney Rapp and his New Englanders will play in the open air ballroom Tuesday night only.

Ben Bernie Film In Stanley

By MICHAEL SHAW

When Ben Hecht and Gene Fowler decided to collaborate on a play, it seemed like a great idea. And although their brainchild, "The Great Magoo," did a quick flop on Broadway, it had a certain success in book form.

It read well throughout, and there was one scene that Boccaccio might have invented, except that there were no flagpole sitters and friendly Coney Island fogs in his day. If you've encountered the book in the lending libraries, you know the scene we mean.

Well, when Paramount called Ben Bernie to the coast to play the orchestra leader in an adaptation of "The Great Magoo," it seemed like another good idea. There would have to be plenty of changes, of course, for the Hecht-Fowler opus was shocking, even in this day and age. But there was racy humor to spare, and a part made to order for the Old Maestro.

'SHOOT THE WORKS'

The movie, directed by Wesley Ruggles and rechristened "Shoot the Works," came to the Stanley yesterday, and while it is good entertainment most of the way, it proved a bit of a disappointment, too.

The play was set at the very bottom of the amusement world, in Coney Island concessions, flea circuses and the like. The characters were low and loud and promiscuous and gusty.

Everything in the film has been, of necessity, refined a bit, and the figures emerge, not as something new and strange, parts of a life that few know exists, but as the familiar stock vaudevillians and carnival people we have seen in countless backstage comedies.

But it is really unfair to complain. The original script was impossible for the films at any time, and doubly so right now, with the clean-up campaign at its height. What is left of the original comedy is a lot of fun, particularly when Ben Bernie and his lads are in the center of the set.

A ROUGHNECK CASANOVA

Oakie, as Nicky Nelson, is a roughneck Casanova whose ambitions soar in half a dozen directions.

He wants to do a vaudeville act, he writes songs and he tries to build up the Nicky Nelson Enterprises, which consist of the Sailor, the Old Maestro and All the Lads, and a defunct whale, for which Nicky barks manfully on Forty-second street, with Alison Skipworth selling the tickets.

Nicky's ruin begins when he falls genuinely in love with a singer, played by the late Dorothy Dell.

The band leaves him and rises gradually to fame and fortune, first as the Mandarins, then as the Varsity Boys and finally as the Cossacks.

The Sailor quits Nicky to play clarinet and clown in the band. The health department closes the whale show.

THE FLEA CIRCUS

Miss Dell gets engaged to the wealthy sponsor of her radio program. Only Miss Skipworth clings to Nicky, now lovelorn and licked, and descended to barking for somebody else's flea circus in Brooklyn.

How Nicky becomes a hero, and how he finds happiness (with the aid of the Old Maestro and a Broadway columnist) you must see the picture to find out.

Bernie makes a splendid impression in his first talkie. His quiet geniality is especially effective against the hectic background. Miss Dell acts so charmingly that one must mourn against her untimely death. Another player who has passed on, Lew Cody, has a small part in the picture. Mr. Oakie and Mr. Karns are as competent as usual, and Miss Skipworth will never fail you.

You've heard "With My Eyes Wide Open, I'm Dreaming" and "A Bowl of Chop-Suey and You-ey" on the radio. They're two of a half dozen songs in the picture.

Lee Roasts Parties

By HARRISON CARROLL

International News Service Hollywood Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD, July 7.—Out of a clear sky, Lee Tracy let loose a verbal blast that probably will cause cinema hostesses to scratch his name off their invitation lists for good.

The slender actor, who plays wise-cracking, debunking roles on the screen, has his dander up about Hollywood's famous parties.

"You can say for me," he declared in his Paramount dressing room, "that a Hollywood party is a gathering where people with no ability to enjoy life meet in a pathetic attempt to have a good time.

"I can count on the fingers of one hand the number of parties I've been to since I came to the coast—and I consider those evenings wasted."

Take it from this fast-talking critic of cinema social life, any party with more than six people who are congenial and who know each other well is the perfect recipe for a dull evening. As to the theory that you have to be a good mixer to get along in Hollywood, Lee snaps:

"Maybe I'd have been a lot better off if I had; but then, again, maybe I wouldn't. At any rate, if I have to be successful that way, you can count me out."

And, incidentally, you don't even see Lee around the night clubs since his mother came out to visit him.

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

"Information Wanted"

THE ANNOUNCEMENT was brief. It occupied merely a line or two on the back page of a newspaper. You see notices like it every day. And if you have dreams of unexpected riches, you never fail to read them. That was how Herbert Cook learned of his good fortune.

He had dreamed along those lines many times. Some day he'd be rich and never have to work in the shoe factory again. At times, he managed to convince himself that things would work out like that. He knew, even to the last detail, exactly what he was going to say to the boss upon the occasion of his leaving. Herbert's wife knew, too. She heard it often enough. She didn't believe that the time would ever come when Herbert would be in a position to speak up to the boss in such a manner. Deep in his heart, Herbert didn't, either.

It made things a little easier, though, to think about it when the bills were large and the pay envelope was small. Most of the time, there was enough to take care of their food and shelter and the barest necessities. There was never much more.

And now, here was the advertisement. It bore the name of a law firm in London. It sought information regarding one Herbert Cook to whom a legacy had been left. "Herbert Cook," it said, "nephew of Henry Cook."

The newspaper shook in Herbert's hands. When he tried to call to his wife, his voice was a thin squeak.

"Look, Hannah, look here!"

The two stood and stared at each other and tried to realize that, after all these years, they were poor no longer.

"Uncle Henry!" Herbert was like a man in a daze. "Gosh, he left me his money!"

Hannah was no less excited than her husband, but she was a trifle more practical. There was the possibility that he was not the right man, she pointed out. He would have to write and make sure.

Herbert did. He wrote that same night. And during the next two weeks, while he awaited an answer, the man was in a fair way of becoming a candidate for the daffy house.

But the communication came at last. It stated that, without a doubt, he was the person whom they had been seeking. And if he would present himself at their offices, the legacy would be his. It would be necessary, they told him, to be there in person. Certain matters pertaining to the estate would have to be settled.

There was both joy and disappointment in Herbert's heart that night. The money was his, all right. But a trip to Europe. It frightened him a little to think of it. Then, too, there was the problem of financing the trip.

"Just think, Hannah," he moaned, "there's the money waiting for me. And I haven't got enough to get over there and get it! Think of it! All I need is a little over a hundred dollars. If that ain't tough luck!"

"Now don't you worry!" Hannah was optimistic. "We'll get it somehow. We've got to. We can't stand to lose all that money because you can't get hold of a hundred dollars somewhere."

They talked over ways and means far into the night. They would have to borrow. There was no other way. It appeared, after a few days, that there wasn't even that way. Few of their friends possessed a hundred dollars that they could afford to lend. Then, too, the story of the money awaiting them in England didn't sound exactly convincing.

If Herbert was slightly daffy before, he was giving out a first-class imitation of a raving maniac at this point.

"One hundred dollars!" This was his favorite groan. "All I need is a hundred bucks, and I can't get it! Just one hundred bucks!"

And then Hannah had a bright idea.

"But you can get it," she cried. "Goodness, why didn't we think of it before? Why, Herbert, all you got to do is write to the lawyers. They'll advance you that much out of the legacy."

Her husband smiled, for the first time in days.

"Why, sure," he agreed. "That's all I need to do" . . .

It was extremely easy. The money arrived in short order. The ticket and passport were taken care of. And at last Herbert was on the ship on his way to Europe.

It was a terrifying experience for the man. Never, in all his 40 years, had he been away from home before. Never away from Hannah even for a single night. He had little money in his pockets. Nor anywhere else for that matter.

There was just the legacy now—for he had thrown up his job before leaving. He grew almost happy again when he remembered what he had said to the boss. And he wouldn't be away long. He'd simply get his hands on the money, and then back to Hannah and a life of ease and happiness.

Most of the way over, he remained in his small cabin. He was a bit timid about meeting new people. And he was too excited to enjoy himself. . . .

Herbert registered at a hotel in London, the first one he came to. He paused only long enough to change his clothes. Then, at last, to the lawyers' offices.

There were several for formalities to be taken care of. He had to identify himself and his signature. The whole procedure was a trifle slow.

"That's all." The gentleman behind the desk smiled.

"All?" Herbert handed back the receipt he had signed. "What do you mean — all? The money—?"

The other man shook his head regretfully.

"This takes care of it." He held up the receipt. "You see, your share of the estate was not as large as we expected. It amounted to just one hundred dollars, the amount we advanced you two weeks ago." . . .

Benny Davis And Kids In Penn

By KARL KRUG

Benny Davis, one of the nation's most successful song writers, and who used to say (perhaps he still does) that Pittsburgh was the best theater town in the world next to New York, received what is known as a rousing reception as he opened his "Stardust Revue" on the Penn stage yesterday afternoon.

Benny has another galaxy of promising youngsters in tow and the entire assemblage makes merry in a zippy frolic that has already kept Benny on the move for 28 weeks and which will probably keep him busy for at least seven more—a season's record of 35 weeks where movie house stage shows are concerned.

If that audience was vociferous in its approval of Benny's proteges, it was equally lusty in its approbation of the boss' own contribution, a medley of his own song hits such as "Goodbye Broadway, Hello France," "Oh, How I Miss You Tonight," "Carolina Moon," "Margie" and all the rest. Just a bar or two of each, and for good measure the whole of "Dancing and Dreaming," the latest song from the always busy and tuneful brain of the man who "found" Hal LeRoy, Jackie Heller, Helen Kane and Ruby Keeler.

TEMPO HAS NO LAGGING

A tempo that knows no lagging moments is the keynote of the present Davis act, with neat vocalizing by the Burke Sisters and some whirlwind toe tap dancing by Edith Mann among its finest contributions. Then there are Patsy and Jimmy Allen, a brother and sister dance team of splendid accomplishments, and Alice Miller, tap dancer extraordinary, all going over to a terrific wave of applause.

Mr. Davis seemed especially proud of little Tony Angelo, youthful singer, who warbled such things as "Wagon Wheels" and "Love Thy Neighbor," and wound up by singing "I'll String Along With You" at the request of somebody or another—I think it was Mr. Davis. Jackie Green is clever at imitations, topping his mimicry of Jolson, Cantor and Jessel with an impersonation of Joe Penner that might have been Joe himself. Jackie also got off one of the neatest gags of the afternoon, to wit: Have you heard the Sally Rand song—"Little Fan, You've Had a Busy Day"?

DANCING AS IS DANCING

As for dancing that is dancing, take a squint at Bobby Lane, an acrobatic wonder, and Shay and Raymond, precision steppers of real laugh producing ability. Through the entire proceedings runs the welcome patter and byplay of Benny Davis, a conscientious and appreciative showman, who was genuinely grateful for the welcome given him yesterday.

As for the screen play, "Murder In the Private Car," it is hokum comedy, and when I say hokum I mean HOKUM. It has everything that anyone has ever thought of to put into a mystery play, and the best that can be said for it is that it has some especially good trick photography in those exciting sequences showing a runaway car traveling at breakneck speed down a mountain grade.

Charlie Ruggles, Una Merkle, Mary Carlisle and Russell Hardie are in it, though why they were wasted on such stuff is beyond me.

The fadeout is sudden and a relief.

Leiber Has Plan for Route

By GEORGE SEIBEL

News from Fritz Leiber indicates that he will join the stars who are going on the road next season with their own repertoire companies. His tour is being arranged by Albert A. Wickes, the Boston producers who handled the Abbey Players in their Irish repertoire. Leiber will play five Shakespearean roles—in "King Lear," "Hamlet," "Macbeth," "Julius Caesar" and "The Merchant of Venice."

Mr. Seibel

He plans to come to Pittsburgh during the early part of the season.

Meanwhile he is very busy with the preliminary work at his summer home in Atlantic Highlands—right across the road from Robert B. Mantell's former home. And during August he expects to visit England with Mrs. Leiber, returning early in September to begin rehearsals.

Leiber's announcement makes it certain that there will be at least four high-class repertoire companies on the road next season. Katharine Cornell is going out with the same group of plays she had last season, to which she has added Ibsen's "Rosmersholm," last played here by Mrs. Fiske. Walter Hampden will be seen in three or four of his most popular plays, including "Cyrano," "Hamlet" and "Caponsacchi." Eva La Gallienne will also sally forth, enlarging the repertoire of last season and dropping "Alice in Wonderland."

TECH SUMMER DRAMA

The students of the summer school of Tech drama department have begun their own summer stock company. For yesterday afternoon and again this afternoon matinees, open to the public without tickets, have been arranged in the Tech Theater. The evening performances require tickets, though notice is so short that there will no doubt be plenty of room.

The bill for these performances includes three short plays—a tabloid version of the "Heeuba" of Euripides, "The Mountains of Bether" by Carroll Pitshugh and "Hector" by Dr. J. C. Logan. Authors Pitshugh and Logan are Pittsburghers, but Euripides hails from Athens.

PLAY WITHOUT WORDS

When I spoke not long ago about the writing of drama, I said that any effective drama could be played entirely in dumb show. Now comes the announcement that a New York producer, Arthur Cremin, will put on a play without words in September. "The Story Teller" is its title and it should be an interesting experiment. One thing is certain about it—no scenes will be given over the radio. But who knows? While there are no words, there may be all kinds of sound effects. Anybody who can invent new sound effects has a great future before him on the air.

NEW BUILDING LAW TERMS STRICT

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

NEW YORK, July 7.—A few people are counting on the new housing legislation as a business stimulant. It seems that we are a long time getting rid of the notion that purchasing power can be "created" by law and that work can be "made" by government.

The new law has some good features. I do not think it will do much harm, if carefully administered. That is about all.

There is too little effective demand for new buildings, the cost of building (labor and materials) is too high, and the credit terms under the act are too strict to allow one to hope for more. If building were cheap, or if the government were going to give building money away, something might be done. But as things are, what are the chances?

In this connection, a persistent notion is that the government should directly or indirectly go into the business of providing cheap housing, "slum clearance," etc. There has been talk of this for over a year, but practically nothing has been done.

After all the talk, it seems to me that the failure of the slum clearance projects to take hold shows why it is so hard to put unsound ideals into practice. It shows how economic laws win in the end.

SLUMS MAN MADE

You see, slums are "man made," and a New Dealer would say, "let us just abolish them." But man himself finds his acts limited by environment and economic forces. So such attempts fail—sooner or later.

Why do we have slums? There are two chief reasons—first, we have poor people; second, we have areas where rents must be low.

Unfortunately, many people cannot afford to pay much rent, and some can't pay any. They go to sections were rents are very low, and we call these places "slums." It does not pay to build good, up-to-date residences there.

But, at the same time, the land is often located near business sections and is very valuable because of its potentialities. Thus the "site rent" (not the building space) is high.

In such cases, the government can compel decent sanitation and fire protection, but not much more—unless it gives our money away.

But no government, New Deal can do two things required, namely, to do away with poor people, and to make land abundant and cheap in areas near city jobs. We can help themselves, and show them charity. But land location is what it is. If it is in the heart of a city, it is bound to be valuable and pay high taxes.

COST PROHIBITIVE

No one, government or individual, can afford to buy such land and build "modern" housing on it, and then proceed to rent dwelling space at any such figure as $7.50 per room. In New York City, it is probable that about $12.50 per room would be a minimum. After the cost of the site, come interest, maintenance charges and taxes.

Now there are many thousands of people who cannot possibly pay that much. What are you going to do for them?

The plain fact is that the government is in exactly the same fix as the individual landlord. It cannot wisely make a permanent investment which does not pay. It can give our money away, but even that can last only as long as it can take the money away from those who have any.

Again, if attractive housing could be furnished in slum areas, people would be drawn away from outlaying areas, causing vacancies there and hindering development plans. The government would be competing with its citizens.

As I see it, the two chief remedies for the building and other "capital goods" industries are (1) to get price of building materials and labor down to where the product can be sold profitably, and (2) to get our money stabilized on a definite standard of value.

Home Owners Loan Head in Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA, July 7.—(AP)—Speeding up action on Pennsylvanians' application for loans to save homes threatened by the Sheriff is promised by Ewing LaPorte, of Pittsburgh, new state manager of the Federal Home Owners' Loan Corporation. He said Ohio, two-thirds the size of Pennsylvania, closed 36,000 loans, while Pennsylvania has closed only 8,000. One of his objectives, he said, is to find out what is the matter.

Reserve Bank Head At World Parley

BASEL, Switzerland, July 7.—(AP)—George L. Harrison, governor of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, arrived early today to discuss important world financial issues with officials of the Bank for International Settlements.

Such vital questions as stabilization of the dollar and the pound and a possible return by England and the United States to the gold standard were expected to be discussed.

STEEL MAKERS AWAIT FALL UPTURN

By B. E. V. LUTY

Production of steel ingots this week may be estimated at 22 per cent of capacity for the five working days, this being the third week of decline from a 60 per cent rate. Production this week was especially light because the holiday split the week. Many mills have been idle the whole week, some others running only before or after the holiday.

Stocking of steel by consumers and jobbers swelled production up to the end of June and liquidation is now curtailing production. Possibly next week's production will make a fictitiously high showing, by orders accumulating this week.

Production in the first fortnight of July is chiefly of rails and material for identified construction jobs, neither being affected by price considerations, and for replenishing mill stocks. Nearly all tin plate mills have been idle this week, but a fair operation is expected next week. On account of price reductions just made, buyers who stocked steel have less advantage in many cases than was expected. They had contracts made before the April advances, good for shipment through June, but reductions just made take off an average of about one-half the advances in bars, shapes, plates, black and galvanized sheets, hot and cold rolled strips and long ternes. Wire products and tubular goods were advanced in April and have not been reduced.

NET PRICE CHANGES

Some of the reductions become effective on shipments made on July 7, one is effective July 9 and others are effective July 10. Only a small amount of business had been placed at the advanced prices and mills will hold up shipments until the effective dates.

Net advances, April advances minus present reductions, are: Billets and slabs, $1 a gross ton; sheet bars, $2; bars, shapes and plates, $1 a net ton; hot rolled sheets, 10 gauge, $2; 24 gauge, $4; cold rolled sheets, heavy and light, $4; galvanized sheets, $5; tin mill black sheets, $2; long ternes, $4; hot rolled strips, $2; cold rolled strips, $4.

When advances were made last April some producers thought the larger of the advances were too great for a single operation, but the majority of mills felt that small advances should have been made in November and February, whereby the April advances represented the making up of lost time.

Through June production represented current consumption plus stocking while now production represents consumption minus liquidation of stocks. As the amount of stocking cannot be estimated with any closeness, production is no measure of consumption and consumption in its entirety cannot be observed because an unusually large part of the consumption is by highly diversified industries and small users.

RAIL DELIVERIES EARLY

The automobile industry alone can be gauged closely, by the weekly estimates and monthly reports of automobile production. The rate in the last three weeks represents consumption of as much steel as can be made by about 10 per cent of total capacity. Except for two makers, the automobile industry did not stock steel to any extent and orders are expected soon.

Fabricated structural steel represents a steady and slightly rising flow of steel from mill to fabricating shop, equal to engagement of about 2 per cent of steel making capacity. Production of rails will virtually end about the middle of this month in Alabama, and eary in August in the Chicago district. While the special price arrangement allows railroads until the end of August to take deliveries the roads need the rails sooner.

Steel production is expected to be light this month and next, but with a slowly rising tendency as buyers liquidate their stocks, while there is also the seasonal influence. Real activity is expected to start in September.

The local scrap market remains in its state of unprecedented dullness. Prices as appraised have undergone no change for a month in any important grade, and sellers regard this fact as indicating inherent strength in underlying conditions.

SENTENCE FIVE IN LOTTERY

As a result of a police crusade against downtown numbers writers, five men were sentenced to pay fines or serve jail terms at hearings before Magistrate J. W. McGowan in Central Police Court today. All were charged with operating lotteries.

They were John Klinger, of 170 Merrimac street, arrested at Sixth and Wylie avenue, fined $5 with the alternative of serving five days in jail; John DiSimons, arrested in his fruit store at 12 Smithfield street, fined $10 or 10 days to jail; Andrew Klapp, arrested in his restaurant at 132 Ninth street, fined $25 or 30 days to jail;

STOCK MARKET MAINTAINS EVEN KEEL

NEW YORK, July 7.—(AP.)—Stocks moved on a rather even keel in the dull early dealings today. A few of the leaders attempted to extend recent advances.

General Motors, Allied Chemical, United States Steel, Santa Fe and Pennsylvania were unchanged to a trifle higher, but Union Pacific, American Can and United States Smelting slipped minor fractions.

Wall street scanned the weekend trade news for signs of resumption of industrial operations after the sharp curtailment witnessed this week in several lines. A moderate rebound in steel activities was forecast.

June chain store reports published so far indicate their business failed to hold the pace of gain over 1933 of the preceding months, but dollar sales still were well ahead of last year. Montgomery Ward & Co. reported June sales of $19,266,336 against $16,163,560 in June, 1933, a gain of 19.6 per cent compared with 37.3 per cent in May.

The American Iron and Steel Institute reported steel ingot output last month totaled 3,615,972 tons compared with 3,352,695 in May, and with 2,564,420 in June, 1933. For the first six months, output was 16,180,889 against 8,874,358 in the corresponding 1933 period.

Weekly commodity price indices show an easing off following recent advances to new 1934 peaks. The Bureau of Labor Statistics' index for wholesale commodity prices during the week ended June 30 declined three-tenths of 1 per cent to 74.8.

Monthly figures compiled by the New York Stock Exchange on the outstanding short interest reflected the recent low ebb of professional speculation as well as reluctance to take the bear side while hopes for an autumn resumption of business recovery are all still strong. The short interest declined to 717,241 shares from 741,038 in May.

Foreign exchange moved narrowly in early trading. The British pound was unchanged at $5.04½. French francs sagged .00⅜ of a cent to 6.59⅜ cents.

GRAIN VALUES HOLD FIRM

CHICAGO, July 7. — Unusual steadiness characterized grain values early today. Friends of higher prices contended that commodities, and especially food commodities, were selling now upon an investment basis.

Opening at ⅜ off to ¼ up, September new 89½-⅝, wheat later held near the initial limits. Corn started ⅛-⅜ lower and subsequently altered little.

Dividend News

General Baking

General Baking Company declared a dividend of $4 on the preferred stock for the period January 1 to June 30, 1934, and a dividend of 25 cents on the common, both payable July 23 to record of July 16. Declaration of dividends had been postponed because of legal proceedings attacking the management and contending voting power of the common should be reduced.

FIREMEN END CONVENTION IN CRAFTON

Climaxing their six-day convention, Allegheny County volunteer firemen held their big parade this afternoon in Crafton. More than 3,000 men and 80 companies were in line, according to John S. Krohe, general convention chairman.

Elmer H. Schmidt, of Mt. Oliver, former first vice president, was elected president for the coming year. Fred Wiehagen, of North Braddock, election judge, announced today. Other officers elected are:

Harry Witzel, Verona, first vice president; Ross Blodgett, Mt. Lebanon, second vice president; A. H. Leck, Stowe Township, secretary; Edward H. Eibs, Brentwood, treasurer; Angelo Cattaneo, Sumnyside, and James O'Connell, of Wall Borough, delegates to Western Pennsylvania Association.

H. S. Hermes, Sharpsburg; J. T. Montgomery, Crafton; James Conlon, Port Vue; Alex Andres, Etna, and George Feeney, of Wall, were named to the executive committee.

In the women's hose battle, the Blawnox team defeated Saxonburg.

2 YOUNG GIRLS END LIVES

SOFIA—(INS.)—Suicide of two young girls in a home for the friendless here disclosed the weird details of a death vow entered into by all 18 inmates of the institution.

The youngsters took the vow to suicide because the matron of the home was ousted from her position. The inmates, attached to the kindly matron, took this means of protesting.

Two of the girls were successful, but a close guard is being maintained over the remaining 16 to prevent them from harming themselves. Most of them had already attempted self-destruction.

Beaten and Robbed, Claims He's Lucky

SOMERVILLE, Mass. —(INS.)—Although Frederick Gay was beaten over the head with a baseball bat, and his wallet, containing a few trinkets was taken from him by three youths, Gay believes that the rabbit foot which he carried in the stolen pocketbook brought him luck for the youths overlooked $100 he had in another pocket.

Clever Police Work On Worn-Down Shoes

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. —(INS.)—A pair of broken down shoes found in a burglarized home and a clever piece of detective work brought about the arrest of an alleged housebreaker. One of the shoes was badly run down, a sure sign of lameness. A former ice man was arrested, who, according to police, confessed.

These Firemen Want to Sell Firewater

NEWARK, N. J., July 7.—(Universal)—Firemen of Oakhurst want to go into the firewater business.

They filed an application here for a license to dispense liquors in their firehouse in the summer resort town, Frederick Burnett, New Jersey alcohol beverage control commissioner, told them the law permitted him to give them the license, but added:

"I wish you would give thought to the question as to whether it would be consonant with public policy. What is bothering me is the thought that, if fire should break out in some of those summer hotels along the shore and panic ensue, serious danger to life and limb might be occasioned if a single fireman were inebriated."

MEN OF OXFORD DINE IN STREET

International News Service.

OXFORD, July 7.—Sandwich dinners obtained from a nearby lunch wagon and eaten on a street bench in full view of a jeering public form Oxford University's latest eccentricity.

A select little group of university men have chosen this bizarre means to protest against the extravagant living of undergraduates.

And like generations of Oxford men before them, they have formed a club to give the campaign some sort of official standing.

Named the Martyr's Memorial Dining Club, its membership at the moment is limited to five because the club premises—a Corporation street bench at the foot of historic Martyr's Memorial—holds just that number.

The founders are Sir Anthony Jenkins, Balliol undergraduate baronet, and Lawrence Whistler, brother of artist Rex Whistler and winner of the Chancellor's English Essay Prize.

With their three other club members, they arrive for dinner at 7, and sit in owlish solemnity, watched by a crowd of undergraduates and the citizenry, who look on and jeer.

BACK PENSIONS BEING PAID

Preparations were being made today to send out more than 250 checks for pensions to retired county employes, following a meeting of the retirement fund board of Allegheny County employes yesterday.

The checks will be for two months—last August and September, and will total almost $40,000.

The amount still in the fund, Controller Robert G. Woodside explained, was $204,000. The County Commissioners, who refused to match contributions with the employes for over a year, declaring the fund insolvent, asserted no funds were available with which to meet the requirements set by law. The State Supreme Court, last week, held the law constitutional.

TEACHERS SEEK 500 MILLION FEDERAL AID

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—The National Education Association had pledged itself to seek 500 million dollars from Congress for the nation's schools.

This grant, according to the platform adopted by the association's seventy-second annual convention yesterday, is to make up for the cuts in school income. The platform definitely stated that federal aid must not entail federal control of schools.

Another feature of the final session of the convention was the adoption of a strong plank for the abolition of child labor.

After stormy debate, the 10,000 teachers attending the convention scrapped a mild and indefinite provision submitted by the platform committee and voted for the following declaration of policy:

"In order that every child, no matter what his economic status, shall fully enjoy the right of a free education from the nursery through university, the educational profession should actively work for the passage of the child labor amendments by the states."

Disregarding the advice of Commander Edward A. Hayes, of the American Legion, the convention also adopted a platform plank opposing the movement to compel teachers to take the oath of allegiance and calling it "a means of intimidation which can be used to destroy the right of academic freedom."

The association voted to hold its 1935 convention in Denver.

SUMMER BOOMS BEER REVENUE

HARRISBURG, July 7.—(AP.)—The hot weather of June increased beer consumption in Pennsylvania.

Revenue from the state tax of $1.24 a barrel reached a new high mark last month, totaling $676,894, an increase of $136,428 or 20 per cent over the June receipts of $540,465 last year.

The previous high mark was established in May last year with receipts of $625,117.

In May and June the levy produced $317,314 more than in the corresponding months last year.

Total receipts from the tax since it became effective May 5, 1933, have been $6,310,887.

Payments of liquor taxes totaled $237,061 last month, increasing to $1,296,090 the aggregate from this source.

YOUTH, 19, HELD FOR BIGAMY

International News Service.

AKRON, O., July 7.—Troubles piled up today for Jack Campbell, the "boy bigamist."

Nineteen-year-old Jack was bound over to the grand jury under $1,500 bond after he admitted to Judge Herman E. Werner that he has two wives.

His wife No. 2 was so angry that she said she was ready to start annulment proceedings. From his jail cell Jack swore that he still loved her and would go back to her if she would let him.

Campbell told about his first wife, the former Kate Lawhorn, of Lovingston, Va. He said:

"I never loved her, and I never lived with her."

Betty, the second wife, found out the truth through a chance remark made by Jack's brother. She called police and had her husband arrested. The young husband looked appealingly at his wife No. 2 in court here, but all she said was:

"That man!"

Russian Aid Society Gets Liquor Permit

The Russian National Mutual Aid Society, 1508 Sarah street, South Side, was granted a liquor license by Judge W. Heber Dithrich, in Quarter Sessions Court, when he reversed the State Liquor Control Board's ruling that the organization was not a social club and therefore not entitled to sell liquor to its members. The Judge ruled that under the new liquor act any body of people banned together for their mutual benefit was entitled to a license.

Sharpsburg Mother Found In Park

Mrs. Edith N. Meyers, of 1622 Middle street, Sharpsburg, mother of eight children, was back home today after being found wandering in Highland Park yesterday, according to Sharpsburg police. Mrs. Meyers, who vanished after leaving a note to her daughter, Sara, 15, asking her to take good care of the children, was found several hours after her disappearance had been reported to police.

Her 17-month-old child is ill in Children's Hospital.

CWA Artists Get $26,000 in Salary

PORTLAND, Ore.—(INS.)—Pacific Northwest artists received in excess of $26,000 from the Civil Works Administration in payment for works done by them under the federal works of art project, it was announced here by Milton A. Miller, Oregon customs collector and paymaster of the art works projects. The payments were distributed among 195 artists.

Lightning Fatal To Pig Farm

WOBURN, Mass.—(INS.)—Enroute with their morning meal, Andrew Merlin found 100 of his pigs sprawled about the yard and 400 mates running amuck all over the place. A bolt of lightning during the night practically wrecked the piggery.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

Johnson Ballyhoo Upsets Ford's 'Surrender'

WASHINGTON, July 7.—Henry Ford's surrender to the NRA was announced here a few days ago, but it stood up for only one edition of the afternoon newspapers. Then Ford heard about it.

The announcement was valid all right. It came officially from NRA headquarters—in fact, from no less an authority than Gen. Johnson himself. Apparently, the only thing wrong with it was that Ford had not yet been consulted.

Here is what happened.

A Ford dealer here has for a long time been the innocent bystander who was continually getting shot in the row between Ford and Johnson. This dealer has been barred from War Department and other contracts for Ford's failure to sign up with the NRA. It does not mean much to Ford's volume of business, but it means a lot to the dealers.

The War Department sympathized with the dealer's position, and recently joined with him in an effort to straighten things out.

SCHEME

Assistant Air Secretary Woodring and other air officials consulted with the dealer. They worked out an idea for a compromise.

This compromise has to be in the form of a letter from Ford to the dealer stating that he (Ford) had complied with NRA rules and would continue to do so. The letter was drawn up on the stationary of the dealer and addressed to him with the signature blank. It was to be sent out to Ford later for signature.

It seemed be a perfectly good idea because Ford has complied with most NRA requirements and exceeded them in some instances.

ERROR

Of course, Woodring had to get Johnson's approval on the letter before it could be sent to Ford. The War Department Samaritan took the letter over to the General. Johnson suggested a few changes in wording, but generally approved. He agreed that the letter would constitute compliance with the NRA, permitting the Ford dealer to bid on government purchases.

Until then, everything was perfect. After that, nothing was.

Johnson almost immediately called in newsmen and informed them that the NRA's foremost antagonist had "surrendered." That would have been a bad word to use even if the deal had gone through, but you can imagine how it struck Mr. Ford when he read it in the papers. Surrender, eh? Woodring wept. He told his associates:

"Johnson has been so indiscreet, I am afraid the whole thing is spoiled."

Johnson's office explained that the General thought the letter from Ford was real, that it already had been signed for Ford.

It was too late then for explanations to do any good.

WHITE LIE

The State Department went to unusual lengths on the inside to keep the Japanese from getting excited about the expedition of Army and Navy bombers to Alaska.

The Japanese know very well what we are sending the bombers up there for, but, in diplomacy, it is considered best to tell a polite lie even when everyone knows you are lying.

At first, it was planned to announce the excursion as a long-distance test flight. That was rather feeble, so the master diplomatic minds decided to bolster it by calling the trip a good-will flight to Canada. That had some foundation because the plans are to stop at one or two points in Canada.

The Canadians, however, did not care much for it. Just as the announcement was being mimeographed in the War Department, word came from Canadians to leave them out of it. The good-will angle, therefore, was stricken out.

ORDER

Wall Street insiders report there is scarcely a brokerage account on the street now which does not comply with the provisions of the new control act. At least that is true of all accounts handled by the reputable concerns. Furthermore, there is scarcely a broker who does not have his affairs in such shape that he can meet any expected regulations from the new commission. That is why prices have held up fairly well.

TUMBLES FROM TRUCKS KILL 2

Two boys were dead today from injuries suffered in motor truck accidents.

Charles Hunt, 6, of 1148 Railroad street, Duquesne, was killed late yesterday when he fell from the rear of an ice truck as the truck started in front of the child's home. It was reported. Arthur Hathaway, 17, of 1401 James street, died last night in Allegheny General Hospital from a skull fracture suffered Monday when he was struck by a truck after falling from another truck, according to the Coroner's report. The accident occurred in Spring Garden road, Reserve Township.

Boy Stages Crash Near Two Doctors

ATLANTA, Ga., July 7.—(AP)—If Willard Grubbs, 19, had to have an accident, he couldn't have picked a better time and place.

Willard's motorcycle struck a parked automobile as two physicians were passing. They pulled him from the wreckage, found he had a broken leg, stripped off their coats and set the fracture. An automobile running board was the operating table.

LEGAL

OFFICIAL—PITTSBURGH

NOTICE is hereby given that the following ordinance was introduced in the Council of the City of Pittsburgh on June 25, 1934, pursuant to the provisions of the several Acts of Assembly, authorizing said City, without petition of property owners, to open, widen, straighten, extend, vacate, grade, pave, curb, macadamize and otherwise improve streets and alleys or parts thereof, within its limits, viz:

BILL NO. 1349.

AN ORDINANCE—Authorizing and directing the grading to certain widths, paving, curbing, and otherwise improving of Butler street, from Voltz way to Baker street, at a point about 190 feet west of Heth's Run Bridge, and the widening and repaving of the roadway of Butler street, from said Baker street to said bridge as affected thereby, including as may be necessary the grading of approaches on streets affected thereby, the relaying of water lines, and sinking of exploratory test holes, letting a contract, or contracts therefor, and providing that the costs, damages and expenses of the same be assessed against and collected from property specially benefited thereby, and providing for the payment of the City's share of the cost thereof.

SECTION 1. Be it ordained and enacted by the City of Pittsburgh, in Council assembled, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by the authority of the same, That Butler street, from Voltz way to Baker street at a point about 190 feet west of Heth's Run Bridge, be graded to certain widths, paved, curbed, and otherwise improved, that the roadway of Butler street, from said Baker street to said bridge as affected thereby, be widened and repaved, that as may be necessary, approaches on streets affected thereby be graded, water lines relaid, and exploratory test holes be sunk. The widths and positions of said grading of Butler street to conform to the terms of Ordinance No. 420, approved July 25, 1933.

SECTION 2. The Mayor and the Director of the Department of Public Works are hereby authorized and directed to advertise in accordance with the acts of Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and the ordinances of the said City of Pittsburgh relating thereto and regulating the same, for proposals for the grading, paving and curbing, and otherwise improving of said street, the widening and repaving of the roadway of said street between said points, including as may be necessary, the grading of said approaches, the relaying of water lines and sinking of exploratory test holes, the contract, or contracts therefor, to be let in the manner directed by the said acts of Assembly and ordinances, and the contract price, or contract prices, if let in separate contracts, not to exceed the sum of two hundred and eighty thousand ($280,000.00) dollars, which is the estimate of the whole cost as furnished by the Department of Public Works.

SECTION 3. The cost, damages and expenses of the same shall be assessed against and collected from properties specially benefited thereby, in accordance with the provisions of the acts of Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania relating thereto and regulating the same, and the city's share thereof shall be chargeable to, and payable from, Bond Fund No. 293, Street Bonds, 1928.

SECTION 4. That any ordinance or part of ordinance, conflicting with the provisions of this ordinance, be and the same is hereby repealed, so far as the same affects this ordinance.

NOTICE is hereby given that the following ordinance was introduced in the Council of the City of Pittsburgh on June 25, 1934, pursuant to the provisions of the several Acts of Assembly, authorizing said City, without petition of property owners, to open, widen, straighten, extend, vacate, grade, pave, curb, macadamize and otherwise improve streets and alleys or parts thereof, within its limits, viz:

BILL NO. 1361.

AN ORDINANCE—Opening Brookline boulevard, in the Nineteenth Ward of the City of Pittsburgh, from West Liberty avenue to Pioneer avenue, and providing that the costs, damages and expenses occasioned thereby be assessed against and collected from properties benefited thereby and providing, further, for the payment of the city's share thereof.

SECTION 1. Be it ordained and enacted by the City of Pittsburgh, in Council assembled, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by the authority of the same, that Brookline boulevard, in the Nineteenth Ward of the City of Pittsburgh, from West Liberty avenue to Pioneer avenue, be and the same is hereby opened to a width of 60 feet, and that the easterly and northerly line shall begin on the present westerly line of Brookline boulevard at a point distant south 2 degrees 44 minutes west 43.97 feet from the present westerly line of Brookline boulevard from the easterly line of the right of way of the West Liberty and Suburban Street Railway; thence shall extend north 74 degrees 07 minutes 15 seconds west 20.0 feet to the easterly line of the right of way of the West Liberty and Suburban Street Railway; thence shall extend north 74 degrees 7 minutes 15 seconds west 20 feet to the westerly line of the right of way of the West Liberty and Suburban Street Railway; Girl in the Family

By BEATRICE BURTON

CHAPTER XXIX.

"You want some hot water, don't you, Lutie?" She started forward. "There's a whole tea-kettle of it on the stove."

But Lutie shook her head and put the bottle behind her back. Her motionless features looked as if they were painted on wood, and in her long shapeless bathrobe she reminded Susan of Mrs. Noah in a Noah's Ark that John had owned in his boyhood.

"I don't want anything just now but an explanation from this young man!" Her head dipped jerkily in Allen's direction. "I think he ought to explain his conduct at once."

"So do I," answered Allen, "and I'm going to do it here and now, Miss Broderick. Susie and I are going to be married. This isn't as bad as you think it is."

"Not as bad!" Lutie cried. "It's ten times worse!" She tossed up her hands in a despairing gesture and the water bag flapped in the air like a red rubber flag. "Certainly you must know that Susan's engaged already! Why, she's as good as married—you can't break up a thing like that!"

Her head turned toward Susan. "You're just as common as you can be or you wouldn't do a thing like this when you're engaged to Wallace," she said. "This is the sort of thing you might expect from a kitchen mechanic—" She turned and went back up the stairs, carrying the bottle by its neck.

Susan faced Allen. "The fat's in the fire, darling," she said and laughed. She was still lighthearted and happy. Now that Lutie knew about Allen and herself she felt a certain relief . . .

"I don't mind her knowing about us," she murmured, her cheek against his coat. "It's odd—I've been so afraid of the family finding us out—finding out that I'm not going to marry Wallace—and now that it's happened, I don't care a bit. I'm glad of it!"

Lutie Ill

Lutie was too sick to get up the next morning and Susan took her her breakfast on a tray.

The daintiness of it seemed to sweeten Lutie's disposition, for after she looked at it she glanced up at Susan with a relaxing of her forehead which had been tightly knotted in a disapproving frown.

"I've been awake half the night, thinking about you," she said, her mouth full of toast. "You know you're just infatuated with that good-looking boy, Susan. You can't take him seriously. He doesn't belong to your class of people at all.

. . . Anyone can look at him and see that." She lifted her sagging chin with the air of one who was the daughter of a hundred earls herself.

"Well, he looks more like a highbrow to me than any man I've ever seen, Lutie." Susan put the cork in an open bottle of camphorated oil on her aunt's bedside table and turned out her night lamp. "You can't make him seem cheap to me no matter what you say about him. I know all about him . . . He's even told me that his father deserted him and his mother, but it doesn't make a bit of difference to me. I want him and I'm going to have him."

House Chilled

All day long the wind blew from the east, and the grate fires smoked. At 10 o'clock when Susan went down to put coal on the fire in the basement she found that one of the grates that held the coal had broken and fallen into the ash pit below. She went upstairs and telephoned Stovall, the furnace man, to come as soon as possible to fix it.

The house was like a tomb. Aunt Edna had a touch of rheumatism in her knee and sat groaning over the parlor fire while she turned the cuffs on one of Uncle Worthy's shirts.

Directly after breakfast, Uncle Worthy disappeared into his den, after asking Susan for some gingerale to mix with his "hitters," and at 11 o'clock she came upon him in the upstairs hall, doing his best to climb upon a chair that stood beneath the hall light.

"What are you trying to do?" she asked him.

He made a wavy motion toward the light. "I'm going to take down half the electric light bulbs in this house and see if I can't cut down these electric light bills." He swore.

"Well, you'd better let me help you," Susan suggested. His voice was thick and his eyes were bloodshot from his bout with the bitters.

He stood and looked at her with dislike in his face while she got up on the chair and unscrewed one of the two light bulbs in the fixture.

"You think I'm not myself, don't you and I don't like it," he said resentfully and went shuffling down the stairs clinging to the banisters.

Uncle Takes Sick

Half way through lunch he got up suddenly, moaning that he was terribly sick, and Susan helped him upstairs. Sounds of his bodily anguish reached her and Aunt Edna as they stood in the hall just outside Lutie's room.

And as they stood there Allen called up from the Courthouse downtown.

"Can you come down and go with me for the license?" he asked Susan when she answered the telephone. "Right away, darling."

Susan made a sound of despair so soft that he did not hear it. "Oh, Allen, I can't. Uncle Worthy's sick, and Lutie's in bed with a cold—and the furnace has gone all to pieces—"

"And you have cold feet," Allen finished.

"No—no—no. I'll tell you all about it tonight," said Susan. "Can't you get the thing without me being there?"

"Well—I don't know. I'll see what I can do. Goodby."

She stood at the telephone for a minute or two, her forehead pressed against the mouthpiece . . . Of course he would think that she did not want to go with him for the license. But tonight when she saw him she would make him understand just how things were. She would put all his doubts and fears at rest.

At half past five when Susan started upstairs to change her dress for dinner she met Lutie coming down. She passed her without a word, walked down the hall and tapped upon the panels of Uncle Worthy's study door.

Lutie Telling Uncle

"I think he's upstairs lying down," Susan volunteered.

"No. He's in here," said Lutie coldly, just as Uncle Worthy called, "Come in."

She vanished within, and Susan did not need her sixth sense to tell her that Lutie had gone in to tell her brother about the disgraceful scene in the dining room the night before. She was sure that Lutie would call it "perfectly disgraceful," and she could imagine just how she would describe it—"and there they were, spooning away for dear life! I was never more surprised or embarrassed. You could have knocked me over with a pin feather!"

Aunt Edna was at the head of the stairs. She had an empty oil-of-wintergreen bottle in her hand and her corsets squeaked as she squeezed past Susan. "I was just going to take this downstairs so you wouldn't forget to get it filled at the drug store tonight," she said. "My knee's all puffed up like a toy balloon. This cold old iceberg of a house—"

"I'll take the bottle downstairs for you," Susan offered holding out her hand for it. But her aunt shook her head. "No thanks. I'm going down anyway—" She limped past Susan, her corsets squeaking as she moved.

Susan stood at the top of the stairs for a moment listening to the sound of her slow uneven footfalls. They went down the hall to the kitchen. Then presently they came back to the hall. The door of Uncle Worthy's study opened and closed. Aunt Edna had gone to sit in at the family conference on Susan's three-cornered love affair.

Allen Returns

A street car stopped at the corner. The reflection of its lighted windows lay for a moment on the snow in front of the house and then was gone. There came the sound of Allen whistling his favorite "Waters of Minnetonka" tune as he came up the front walk and around to the side of the house.

Susan gave her hair a last pat with the brush and ran a powder puff quickly across her nose and chin and forehead, whitening a skin that was lovelier without powder. Then she went out into the hall to wait for Allen. The family were still shut away in the study, and she would have a second to tell him what Lutie had done. She wondered if Uncle Worthy would ask him to leave the house and where he would go if he did leave . . . She wondered, with a thrill of excitement, if he would want her to go with him and if she would have the courage to do it.

After a minute or two had gone by and Allen had not appeared she went softly down to the landing and peered over the railing. There was not a sound in the lower hall and it was empty in the white glare of the lights. Allen's hat and overcoat were not on the hall tree. What could have happened to him since she had heard the thud of the door closing three or four minutes before, she asked herself, running down into the hall.

The door of her uncle's study stood open, and the study was empty, too.

'Committee' Meets Allen

As she stood looking into the small room with its books and its old furniture and its bottles she caught the murmur of voices from the rear of the house. From the entry way at the end of the rear hall.

Susan pulled open the door and hurried down the cold little passage. At the foot of the three steps that went down to the side door stood Allen, facing the three people who had evidently gone there to meet him as he came in. The two women stood on either side of Uncle Worthy who was talking to Allen, and it struck Susan that they were like a wall, thick and solid and immovable, as they stood there in a row.

"And just who and what are you Mr. Sholes, if I may ask in the interest of my niece?" Uncle Worthy was saying in his booming voice as Susan came into the little hallway.

Allen shot a look at Susan before he answered. There was a tiny twinkle of amusement in that look, and he did not seem to be at all disturbed by what was happening.

"Well I intend to be a lawyer, sir," he said in a pleasant goodnatured tone.

Uncle Worthy grunted. "I see. You're not anything now, but you intended to be something by and by," he observed.

"Yes, sir." Allen was still courteous, still pleasant. "I'm studying law at night. In the daytime I work down at the Court House. Deputy clerk."

Uncle Worty made that grunting contemptuous sound in his throat once more. "And what makes you think that you can come into a house like this and force your attentions on a girl like my niece, you—you jackleg!" he roared.

Junior Patrol Mail Box

We see where a little girl won a marble shooting championship, fellows!

Which just goes to show that maybe the girls can show the fellows how to play their own games sometimes!

Wonder if we have any girls who are members of the Junior Patrol and who can play marbles real well? If so, we would like to know their names, and get letters from them.

Speaking of vacation, President Roosevelt is now enjoying a vacation, too. He is on a warship, you know, making a journey through the Panama Canal Zone and on out into the Pacific Ocean to the Hawaiian Islands. After visiting them, he will come back and look at some of the great new dams and other projects they are building in the Northwest.

We all hope he has a swell time. His visit to those lands the United States owns in other parts of the world is a good way to call our attention to them. Often, many people forget all about them.

Really they are very important. Do you know where they are on your maps? Have you studied them in your geography yet? Maybe you could get the book out now and see something about them.

The Hawaiian Islands are especially interesting. They are almost in the middle of the Pacific Ocean, and on the big map they are only a few small dots. But, really, they are pretty big islands. And when you get over there, and see them up close, you see that they are wonderful islands indeed. There are groves of palm trees, and the air is warm and balmy, and the sea is warm and the waves sparkle in the sun. Acres of pineapples grow and other good things to eat.

Then, too, the Hawaiian Islands are important for our country's defense. It would be pretty hard for an enemy to attack us from the West as long as we hold the Hawaiian Islands.

Don't forget to let us know where you go for your vacations, fellows. We would like to get picture postcards from every one of you. Or, better still, how about a letter?

According to Doyle

Daily Short Short-Story

By WARREN A. REEDER

When Doyle first came to us he was fresh from some little two-bit league in southwestern Texas. He was about medium height, kind of awkward and really didn't look like a pitcher except for one thing—he had big ears. If it hadn't been for those ears I guess Mac would have fired him off the club during that first year on account of the screwy things he did.

He joined the club on a Thursday morning. That afternoon we hooked up with the Bears in the first of a three-game series. Our pitchers had been wobbly for quite a spell and Gentry, our starting pitcher, apparently felt that he had to go along with the boys, because he got himself batted out of the box in the second inning.

I don't know why Mac did it—a superstitious hunch, maybe—but he flagged this fellow Doyle in from the bullpen to take Gentry's place.

Doyle, however, with a chew of tobacco that stretched his cheek all out of shape, wasn't a bit perturbed. He ambled in and started pulling a Frank Merriwell. He shut the Bears out for the rest of the game and only allowed them one hit.

After the game Mac rushed out on the field and fell all over himself congratulating Doyle.

"Boy, oh, boy, boy!" he beamed, as he headed for the dressing room with Doyle. "That was some pitching."

Doyle stopped and looked at him sort of disgustedly. Then he spat deliberately. "Thet warn't no pitchin'," he said.

Mac's jaw sagged. "It wasn't?" Doyle pointed. "You see where the pitcher stands? Well—there's a hill there thet throws him up in the air. Gits me so fur up in the air I can't do a thing."

Mac goggled. "That's the pitcher's mound!" he expostulated.

Doyle looked at it suspiciously. "Yeah?" he said, in a show-me manner. "Wal—you git thet field leveled off nice and smooth and you'll see some real pitchin' from me—I kin tell you."

Mac began to perspire. "Listen," he pleaded, "I can't do that—it'd cost too much money. All the fields in the league are like that. You'll get used to it, all right."

We had a bad start in the league that year and since Doyle came up too late to be of much use to us we decided to make a play for third place in the league, which meant a little series dough.

The Blues played the last three games of the season with us. When they came into town we were tied for third place. We won the first game with Doyle and they nudged us out in the second. So it all hung on that third game whether they or we were going to get third place.

Although Doyle was tired, Mac stuck him in. He managed to stagger through the first eight innings somehow. In the meantime we went out and got him a one-run lead.

In their half of the ninth the first man up singled. The next man dodged a wild ball, it struck his bat and he bounced into a double play.

Two out. Things looked bright for us.

Doyle passed the next man. He ran two strikes on the next man and then Nails—the plate umpire—yelled, "Hit with a pitched ball—take yer base!"

We protested over his decision, but it didn't do us any good.

Doyle looked like he was tiring, but he wouldn't let Mac put in a fresh pitcher. He ran the count to two and three on the next man and then passed him.

Three on and "Ducky" Temple, a heavy hitter, coming up!

He wound up and let fly. Ball one.

Again he pitched. "Str-i-ke one!" Nails bawled.

"Wh a a-t?" Ducky screamed, as if outraged.

"You heard me," Nails snapped back.

Then Doyle did something that nearly gave us heart disease. He walked up to the plate. "Mister Umpire," he said and everybody in the stands could hear him, "you was blind as a bat on that pitch. A blind man could see it was a ball."

"Yes, sir," Doyle went on. "You was blind and—"

Nails suddenly recovered himself. "You'll git back on that mound or I'll put you outta the game so fast your head'll swim."

Doyle turned to Ducky. "Mister," he told him, "you got cheated on that pitch, but I'll make it up to you—I'll pitch you two straight balls."

And he did!

He just walked back to the mound and threw two over that were so wide the catcher had to jump away out to one side to get them.

A three balls and one strike count!

And then he calmly proceeded to strike Ducky out!

We had won the series and third place. We rushed out on the field and mobbed him, of course, and finally when we were settled down in the clubhouse somebody thought to ask him why he had done it.

"Mister," he said, and screwed up his eye solemnly, "dishonesty is worth a bird in the bushes—but honestly is worth two birds in the bushes."

And he meant it—Doyle was like that.

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Until Love Came

The garden slept before the moon arose,
The poplars were tall shadows and the stars
Lent but faint luster to gardenia's snows
And made vague ghosts of slim Italian jars.
But when the moon came, flooding earth with light,
Each leaf and petal was once more defined.
The lily pond was silver, burnished bright,
And every tendril etched where jasmine twined.

My life was void of form, a garden dark,
With creeping phantoms and with misty doubt
Till love came up, rising in mighty arc
Of light to drive the sombre shadows out.
Then my soul's garden showed on flower and tree
Each leaf of good when love illumined me.

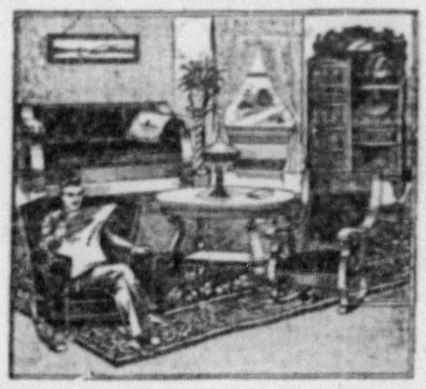
KEYHOLE GLIMPSES INTO THE HOME LIVES OF FILM CELEBRITIES.



Today the Candid Camera gives you the truth about the home life of Hollywood. Here we see Clark Barrymore, after a hard day at the Studio. Hereafter, when anyone says that these friendly, unspoiled people live riotous, unrestrained lives, you can snap your fingers and exclaim, "Nuts! They're just folks, like you and me, who got where they are by study and hard work."

As a matter of fact, all the stars devote every minute they can spare to helping humanity. For instance, "C. B.", as we who know him have come to call him is not as you might suppose wasting his time with the Daily Racing Form. He is studying his thesis which he will read before the Academy of Motion Picture Arts & Sciences. In the thesis he solves the censorship problem by suggesting that anyone who doesn't like this or that scene can impose a voluntary censorship by closing his eyes tight.

By the way, do not fail to see this loveable man's next picture, in which he enacts a thrilling scene when he accidentally sits down on a third rail.

Getting George Ready for the Cruise

GEORGE, I KNOW HOW IT EXCITES YOU WHEN I TALK ABOUT SPENDING A LITTLE MONEY, BUT I CAN'T GO ON THAT YACHT CRUISE WEARING A HAT THAT LOOKS LIKE PART OF AN OLD DOORMAT.
OH, WELL, THOSE SAILOR HATS ARE CHEAP. GET ONE.

ALSO PEGGY AND I NEED CLOTHES. THIS IS ONE TIME WE JUST CAN'T GO SOMEWHERE TRYING TO APPEAR AS THOUGH WE DON'T CARE HOW WE LOOK.
CLOTHES, TOO? WELL, WE COULD USE PART OF THE RENT MONEY IF. .
AND WE NEED BAGGAGE. ALL I HAVE IS AN OLD IMITATION OIL-CLOTH TELESCOPE, ALL PUFFED OUT ON THE ENDS FROM TYING ROPE AROUND THE MIDDLE OF IT.
WHAT ABOUT MY ALLIGATOR GRIP? I'LL GET A HANDLE AND LOCKS AND STRAPS FOR IT.
McNaught Syndicate, Inc., N. Y.
ALSO PEGGY AND I NEED SHOES. I THINK, GEORGE DARLING, THIS IS AN AFFAIR WHERE WE SHOULD JUST GRIT OUR TEETH AND RESOLVE NOT TO FEEL ALL BROKEN UP OVER BUYING A FEW NECESSITIES.
THE PARTIES WHO'LL HAVE TO GRIT THEIR TEETH ARE OUR CREDITORS. .. ANYHOW, AS YOU SAY, WHY WORRY?

THE NEBBS

Hello, Amby

HEL-LO, I UNDERSTAND THE OLD FLAME IS ALL AGLOW - A LETTER COMES AND MONEY GOES - THAT'S HOW I WOULD BE LOVED.
'WHAT ARE YOU TALKIN' ABOUT? IF YOU GOT ANYTHING TO SAY, OUT WITH IT. I HATE HINTING.

The Last Waltz?

Allied nations of the world are pretty much like the waltzing mice.

One momentous day, the mice held an epoch-making conference.

Revolving rodents came to it from all over the world.

European rotating rats drove up 16 abreast.

One American centrifugal mouse crossed the Atlantic on a bit of toast.

That was all the navy had left.

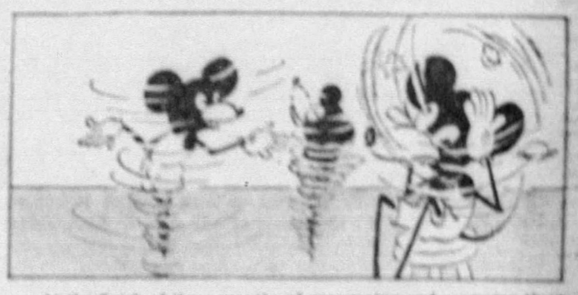
Previous conferences of the mice had done him in.

When he got there, he was exhausted with charitable feelings and disgusted with hope for the future.

The mice twisted in executive session for weeks.

They got dizzy trying to pick up the tempo from the interpreter.

All that the European mice had was rhythm.



At the finish of three months of proconning and conproning they arrived at the decision that shook the world.

They decided to start all over again. And waltz the other way.

So now they're waltzing the other way.

What did the American mouse get out of it? He got some free dancing lessons.

They also drank his health in the pearly morning dew of the forget-me-not.

That was hospitable sarcasm he will never forget.

Now he is out of step with the world because they are waltzing the other way.

It's his own fault. He has been too hungry for partners.

Some day he will learn to sit out a waltz or two.

Let's leave the twirling to Casey and the strawberry blonde. And allow the band to play on.

ODD FACTS

The lord of the winged race is the frigate bird. He is a navigator who never reaches his bourn; his flight seems almost ceaseless. To a bird with such superb wing apparatus the metaphor "he sleeps upon the storm" almost becomes literal. This black solitary bird is little more than wing, his pinions measuring 15 feet, even surpassing those of the condor of the Andes. Although sometimes seen 400 leagues from land, the frigate bird is said to return every night to its solitary roost.

Contrary to general belief, it would appear that the largest organ in the world is not in Vatican City, but the one in the Convention Hall, Atlantic City, N. J. It possesses seven keyboards, 1,233 stopkeys, and 32,832 pipes. This gigantic monster is blown by electric motors totaling about 404 horsepower.

A machine which, its inventor claims, can measure the strength of love between two persons is to be installed in the Psycho-Technical Institute at Belgrade. It will be used to test engaged couples, to ascertain their suitability for one another.

From the soot in the chimney of the London mint as much as 75 pounds worth of pure gold has been extracted in the course of a year.

The Scottish Zoological Park claims to have the finest collection of penguins in the world, there being 74 individuals of five different species.

One of the differences between alligators and crocodiles is that the latter have interlocking teeth, while the former have teeth that meet like ours.

Perfect music can be played on the world's smallest violins, 2½ inches long, made by John Faocare, of St. Louis.

The city of Rochester is reputed to contain more historical buildings than any other place in England.

A Showdown Now Due

Traction Conference Controversy Seems Headed for The Courts—Comment on Local News

Mayor W. N. McNair's bold course in swearing in Theodore L. Moritz as chairman of the Traction Conference Board, in defiance of the City Council, brings the game that he has been playing to a showdown. If he is bluffing in assuming that he has the authority to proceed without Council's approval, his action makes it probable that the courts will have to be appealed to, to call his bluff.

Mayor McNair has also enlivened the sultry season with the threat that he will not permit the proposed Liberty Tube improvements to be made by the County Commissioners if tolls are to be charged. If they take a steam shovel over there, he'll have the police dump it in the river, the Mayor says. But Pittsburghers would do well not to worry unduly about this. It will be time enough to become hot and bothered when the police march against that shovel.

The opinion is given that the ban on fireworks proposed by Robert Garland, president of City Council, as the result of the numerous Fourth of July casualties, has a much better chance of acceptance than when submitted to previous Councils. Let us hope so. Mr. Garland makes another sound suggestion in calling for similar action by the councils of the boroughs surrounding the city. All should co-operate in this safety movement.

The question of traffic safety comes to the fore again with the announcement that deaths from automobile accidents in Pittsburgh so far this year are in excess of the number of similar fatalities in the corresponding period last year. Analysis of the mishaps reveals one particularly disturbing feature—an increase in the number of children killed. Careful parents will see in this need for increased watchfulness.

With the schools closed, children are under greater temptation to play in the streets, and thus run the risk of traffic accidents, than at other times of the year. Fortunately the city playgrounds and recreation fields will open Monday under trained supervision. Keeping the children out of danger should be counted as one of the important benefits that come from them. By providing wholesome recreation they also keep the older boys out of moral danger, for without the recreation fields there would be more corner loafing and malicious mischief.

To return to the subject of automobile accidents: The question arises if the increase may not be due, in part at least, to the increase in the number of drivers. The State Highway Patrol reports that the crop of new drivers is unusually large this year. The month of May set a new mark in the number taking the examinations for operators' licenses. A total of 24,878 took the tests, as compared with 14,895 in May last year. It indicates more prosperous times, if nothing else.

While motor mishaps may be due to bad driving, they may also be caused by defects in the machine. Apropos of that, a request has come out of Harrisburg that auto owners have their cars inspected as early as possible in the current compulsory inspection campaign. It is comforting to have the assurance which comes from driving a mechanically safe car. An additional reason for early inspection is that if put off too long the duty may be overlooked and a fine incurred.

There is still another kind of safety to which consideration must be given at this season—the safety, from a sanitary standpoint, of the camps in which so many boys and girls are spending their vacations. Parents of the juvenile campers will be pleased to learn that officials of the State Health Department have begun an inspection of such camps to see that sewage disposal, and milk and water supplies, conform to the requirements of health.

Another official announcement is made which has some bearing on this same subject. It is that the sealing of abandoned mines has been resumed in Allegheny and five other counties in Western Pennsylvania. The work is being done by the State Health Department with Federal funds, and the purpose is to stop the pollution of the streams by the sulphuric acid which drains from unsealed mines. With pure water in the rivers, aquatic sports will be much more attractive.

Pure air is another need, to which attention is called in a current bulletin of the Pittsburgh Motor Club. The club's committee on highway safety reports that a scientific study, just completed, reveals that carbon monoxide is present in measurable concentration in passenger compartments of approximately six out of every ten cars operating in Western Pennsylvania. Loose floor boards, or defective exhaust or carburetion systems, are usually to blame—which points out its own moral.

There is a large class of people—hay fever sufferers—to whom the air soon will be poisonous because it will contain the pollen of ragweed and other plants. Their suffering can be mitigated, Health Director Ray P. Moyer believes, if property owners will cut weeds on vacant lots. There is an ordinance requiring this, and Dr. Moyer is going to enforce it. It is desirable that he do so, not only for the sake of the hay fever victims, but for the sake of the city's appearance.

Leo G. Altmayer, famous for his watermelon parties for unfortunates of various kinds, has experienced so much pleasure from his benevolences that he would like to extend them and have all the American people join with him in kindly acts. To that end he proposes national recognition and observance of July 29 as "Good Samaritan Day"—a distinctive day to foster and practice kind deeds. The proposal has merit.

A shady porch, a delightful novel, a Sunday afternoon in midsummer, make an attractive combination. The novel may be found in the new serial starting in tomorrow's issue of the American Weekly, the magazine distributed with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. It is called "She Walked Into His Parlor," and the author is Maysie Greig. There are many other good things in the magazine.

Diana, the Huntress, or her counterpart, proves an intriguing figure in tomorrow's version of "Tim Tyler's Luck," as pictured by Lyman Young in Puck, the Comic Weekly section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. The adventures of Flash Gordon and Jungle Jim also will be found entertaining. There is an abundance of pure fun for those who ask for laughter.

Better Late Than Never

Announcement is made at Washington that the Navy Department will open bids on August 15 for construction of twenty-four warships—four cruisers, fourteen destroyers and six submarines.

That is welcome news to the nation. And evidence of the neglect to which the national defense has been subjected is furnished by the fact that the cruisers were AUTHORIZED by a Republican Congress as long ago as 1929—yet it has remained for the Roosevelt Administration to get the funds appropriated by the Democratic Congress in 1934 to make the 1929 authorization good.

Moreover, besides the naval appropriation for cruisers the Administration has provided $40,700,000 out of the Public Works funds to build the destroyers and submarines and improve the naval aircraft factory at Philadelphia.

This naval construction work is part of the effort to get the Navy up to treaty strength by 1942—an effort which must begin with the 1929 program, four years late, and forge ahead as rapidly as it may.

However, a late start is better than no start at all.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, July 7. — They dragged me, a golf atheist, out to a Great Neck course. Rube Goldberg and John Golden did. I went to the country to sit on verandahs, gaze pensively out to sea and meditate on the blessed promises. But here I am in borrowed golf togs wandering around like a fellow lost after an airplane crash.

Four hysitters saw me try to tee off, miss and grab for my falling britches in one stroke. Two, with no more culture than razor backs, laughed out loud and the other two pretended to be hunting for something behind a tree. I suppose no one grunts "oof!" when swinging a club.

And can I help it if my pants don't fit? This time I'll hit that ball if I have to do a little plowing under. I not only hit it, but I bequeath the club the makings of a first class well with love and kisses. I believe I tore something loose in that first wild swing.

Snapped like a new pair of suspenders. Maybe it was a ligament. That would be me. One swing at a golf ball and I'm laid up stringhalted for the summer. I have a nice home, good neighbors, a zither and three charge accounts, but I leave all to come out here and bust a puckering string.

* * *

Little man what now? Just stand like a sap I suppose. This is Gene Buck's jersey pull-on. You could toss a dog down my neck at 30 paces. That caddy—the cad—motions me to come on. I'll start, ouch, when I'm ready. I want to deep breath awhile. One, two, three—exhale. One, two—I knew it! A lung or something has slipped its moorings. Hear that funny whistle when I inhale. Still if worst comes to worst I can go back to the river show boats. Toots McIntyre the Human Calliope!

* * *

I'm standing in someone's way. All my life I've been in someone's way. All my life, I have. All-ways in the way-y-y! That ball just missed me. Go ahead beat me with your clubs, tramp me in the sod. Have your fun! Hit him once, one see-gar! Someone waves from the club porch. He wants to play! No, he's motioning me away. What is it? I suppose I'm standing on a patriot's grave or where they've planted sun flowers. Don't look now but there comes a fellow in uniform. I'll act indifferent. This is free country, the hills and dales belong to the people. Thoureau once said . . .

* * *

He wants to know if anything's the matter. In the name of Aunt Clara's waxed doves under glass, here I am 30 miles from home, a nervous wreck, probably bleeding internally and wearing an outfit that would snug a Graf Zeppelin and he asks if anything is the matter? Nothing, sweetheart. I've never felt better. Want to see me do a little muscle flexing? Or maybe you'd like me to do an interpretive dance out on the greensward? You know, twitter about on my tip toes, leap for butter cups and shiver to the ground like a falling leaf. Don't you just love the big open spaces, mister, with its groves, grassy heaths, hedged roads and solitary glades?

* * *

The trouble with my game of golf is my stance. That's the six-letter-word of being pie-footed. Still one can't have everything. A lot of people would trade their stance, sight unseen, for my disappearing pencil act. See, there it is in my hand. Now where is it? And how many with perfect stances can do my imitation of Buffalo Bill that makes me such a one at parties?

* * *

I might mosey over to that sand trap. But even if I had a little shovel and bucket I'm too weak for my kind of games. In fact, my strength is ebbing fast. How hot the sun! Maybe a St. Bernard will come along with a cask of water around his neck. Headline: Strangely Dressed Body Found on Golf Course!

* * *

Even the caddy has left me. Good riding boy! Tell all the folks I asked for them in my last minutes. Have them give Ryley Cooper my salmon pink shirt. Away off yonder by the cool of the clubhouse a group is laughing and putting. Putt, putt, putt—putt, putt, putt, putting all the day. I must remain calm.

* * *

If I ever get glued together again, bet you can't guess what. Give up? I'll help with a teeny hint. I'm never, never going near those places where they smack silly white balls with sticks. If I were—despite the agony notice my control of tenses—going in for exercise in my sedate years I'd certainly take up something not so durned stooping.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

The Generation Who Never Had a Chance

"You can't blame him. He's been half hungry ever since he was born. There's no work for him. Boys like him haven't a chance."

Falteringly, anguish and defiance mingling in her broken voice, the old German mother pleaded for her boy; that weak, vicious, utterly pitiful young thing who was all she had saved from the hell of war. Words were not needed; words could not help. He, himself, was the record of what had been, and what inevitably would be. Yet, being a mother, she begged for understanding.

A delicate, rickety child. Starved even while he still lay in her body. No food for them in those dark, crippled years after 1919. No food for anyone in all Germany except Hate. Now, there he stood, born of Starvation and Hate, "a tall, gangling boy with limp, fair hair and weak eyes that avoided yours, and a brooding, listless manner . . . his hair disordered . . . his shirt gaped open, showing the pulse beating in his thin neck."

Weak eyes that saw only their own Hunger . . . a beating pulse that fed on its own Hate. A world filled with just such desperate, starving boys . . . that was what the war had done. A generation who had never had a chance; who would never have a chance unless they turned like famished beasts and fought for it . . . gouging, clawing, ripping; cramming starving mouths at last with the bloody wreckage of their fatherland.

And who could blame them if they did?

Watching the Brown Shirts marching, marching up the Kaiserstrasse . . . "column after column of young men, shoulder to shoulder singing" . . . their white, starved "uplifted faces surging like the foam of black onrushing water into the night" . . . Franzle wondered. Listening to the old voices droning on an on—deaf to the gathering horror outside the door . . . she wondered again.

"These quiet, elderly people didn't know what it meant to be young and never to have had one's youth, to have been born, amidst havoc and to have grown up with starvation and ruin, always a little frightened, always wondering whether you could get food, whether things that were there today would be there tomorrow—"

No, the elderly people who had been born in abundance and security, didn't know — couldn't know what lay in the heads or the hearts of those who battered at the door. Nor could those boys in Brown Shirts know what lay in the hearts and heads of those who remembered another world . . . that sweeter, safer world "before the war." And because neither one could possibly know the other—Germany flames today. And the world smolders with her.

That tragedy of the generation "who never had a chance"—that is Germany's story today. A cheated generation fighting for its lost opportunity. Out of that fight—out of the horror and pity and incredible agony of that struggle in the dark—I. A. R. Wylie has built her tender and terrible story of modern Germany, "TO THE VANQUISHED."

Easy enough for us to sit and sneer at Hitler. Damn the Prussians or blame the Jews. Or delve into politics and economics for the source of this horror that is spreading through every nation. But back of all the bewilderment and berating . . . back of the theories and statistics . . . the reason stands starkly simple.

Cheated youth—"not ordinary youth, rebellious, generous, hopeful and desirous of happiness, but desperate, angry youth, already defeated, already weary of itself and its own futility, its fists clenched against a world in which it had no place or future."

And, because they were so desperate, the most ruthless man could lead them if he only convinced them that he was for them. Hitler's secret? That was it!

"In all these myriad eyes fixed on him was worship, a limitless offering of obedience, a hunger for self-immolation that was like a frustrated, tortured physical love. They were his, abandoned to him. They did not wish to think their own thoughts or follow their own wills. They asked no more than to be purged of themselves, melted down in fire and lost forever in the great iron mould he was preparing. It was almost finished. When the last 'I am' had been quenched in them, he would be ready. No man had ever held such a weapon in his hands."

There was the picture. What was the answer?

Listening to the droning elders, watching that thickening shadow that loomed nearer and nearer, outside her door, young Franzle wondered. And, in a flash of vision—knew. What was the answer to Germany's horror—to the hunger and hate and despair of the whole world? More hate? More fighting? No—NO! There was only one answer—

"Blessed are the merciful!"

Who had said it? Christian or Jew? It did not matter. It was God's truth for everyone. Mercy—that was the only healing for hate. That was the only filling for hunger. If men could forget their fear and their anger . . . if they could put up their guns and reach out their hands to each other, in understanding and love—that was the answer. Mercy!

Through tears young Franzle saw the answer to it all before she, too, was caught and broken in hate's hell. Through tears, this lovely, awful book must have been written. And with tears you should come to it—reading it slowly, skipping nothing—whether you are Christian or Jew, German or American. For this is not only Germany's story.

This is the story of every nation . . . of the cheated, desperate youth of every nation . . . a whole world crumbling to bloody wreckage beneath the desperate marching feet of boys who "never had a chance."

If you care for that world, or even for your own selfish survival, you will be interested in that book. Doubleday, Doran & Co., publish it. It is not very long. But it holds the only answer that can save us before it is too late.

Once Overs

By J. J. MUNDY

Are you prone to exaggerate?

What another person mentions as ordinary, do you allude to as extraordinary?

Speaking of speed, do you claim 65 miles an hour when not traveling more than 40?

If three panhandlers accost you on the way home, do you say a half a dozen stopped you within a short distance?

If you suffer pain, is it always "intense?"

If you mention the number of your friends, do you increase the number at least threefold?

In speaking of your own charity, do you enlarge the sum to at least twice the amount given?

In fact, do you overstate everything?

Certainly, you cannot believe the statements you make.

You would be incensed if called a perpetual liar.

Then why are you so unreliable in your statements?

Do you gain pleasure and excitement from making everything bigger and better than it actually is?

If you should find out that you are called the crowd's biggest liar, how would it affect you?

It may be that you'd like that reputation.

Senator Turns Spotlight On Needs of U.S. Army

By James T. Williams, Jr.

THANKS to the patriotic initiative and wise statesmanship of the able chairman of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, Senator Sheppard, of Texas, the truth about the urgent needs of the Regular Army is no longer hidden in the files of the House Committee on Military Affairs.

In the closing days of the Seventy-third Congress, the Senate on motion of Senator Sheppard authorized its Committee on Military Affairs to make an inquiry into the need for an increase in the present strength of the officer and enlisted personnel of the Regular Army.

This information had been laid before the House Committee on Military Affairs by competent witnesses. But the hearings at which this testimony was given were never printed. Apparently no effort was made by the chairman or members of the House committee to get them printed.

But the Senate committee, under the chairmanship of Senator Sheppard, supported by both the Democratic and Republican members of the committee, got this information printed before Congress adjourned.

* * *

Measure Buried In Committee

SENATOR SHEPPARD began the Senate inquiry by calling Congressman Clark W. Thompson, of Texas, who, after a careful study of the needs of the Army, introduced a bill in the House at the last session calling for an increase in the Army to the peace strength authorized in the National Defense Act. This measure, which the House committee failed to report, was enthusiastically indorsed by the American Legion, other veteran organizations and patriotic societies working for the upbuilding of the national defense.

It has the support of the Reserve Officers' Association. It is indorsed by the Secretary of War, the Chief of Staff, by Gen. Pershing and by those members of the House, who, although not members of the Committee on Military Affairs, have taken the time to study and inform themselves concerning the reasons why the United States has sunk to seventeenth place in military rank among the nations of the world.

Congressman Thompson gave to the Senate committee the same testimony that he gave to the House committee. He showed how the modest increase, for which the bill provided, would not only bring the Army to the peacetime strength authorized by law, but would provide employment "for many young Americans at much less cost than some relief agencies are able to do.

Congressman Thompson found that it cost last year to maintain a young man in the Civilian Conservation Corps $1,400. The cost for the second year may be slightly less because no new housing will be required. The cost in the Army to maintain an unemployed American and to train him for the defense of his country would only be $800 a year.

"So long as we have an unemployment problem," said Congressman Thompson, "we can therefore assume that it will cost less to care for a young man in the Army than in any relief agency that can be provided."

* * *

Foes of Defense Reason Peculiarly

CONGRESSMAN THOMPSON also gave the Senate committee some interesting testimony regarding the sapping expeditions to prevent the upbuilding of the Army. He said in this regard:

"It is very interesting to follow the course of national defense in the House of Representatives and to see the peculiar line of reasoning that has been used by the people who would make of our Army a very weak and impotent body. The most effective argument that I have been able to find in the Record is the economy plea. Yet here is a bill which can save the government a great deal of money in caring for these young men. I am very sorry that it did not get the floor of the House, because I believe it would have passed with very little opposition."

The reason the Thompson bill did not get to the floor of the House was because it was buried in the House Committee on Military Affairs. So was the War Department bill to provide for a GHQ air force, which would give to the United States a military air force unsurpassed by any other nation. So was buried in the same committee every constructive legislative proposal that has been introduced in Congress for the last four or five years.

And the testimony of the witnesses called in support of the Thompson bill was buried in the same House Committee on Military Affairs, and would never have seen the light of print but for the action of the Senate in ordering its own committee to get the facts about the Army and publish them for the information of Congress and the country.

Bob Bartlett Returns to the Arctic—Pirates of the Chinese Coast—"Bull" Reeves Belies His Name

By Edwin C. Hill

THE sea gives up three stories, one about bluff Bob Bartlett, the second a grim tale of pirates off the China coast, and the third that of Joseph Mason Reeves, the new commander of the United States fleet.

It is just 25 years since Bartlett, then a robust Newfoundlander of 32, shook hands with Admiral Peary 100 miles from the North Pole and wistfully watched the admiral set out with the Negro, Matt Hansen, on the dash that resulted in the discovery of the North Pole. He would have given anything to have gone along, but as he said:

"I'm a better sailor than Matt. But he's a better dog driver. The admiral knows his business."

To this day it is a wonder to Bob that anyone can doubt that the admiral really got to the pole.

"Why," he says impatiently, "when they begin to question the ability of Peary to cover 132 miles in four days by sledges, they don't know what they are talking about. I, myself, have done 90 miles a day."

Forty years on the sea, 12 times shipwrecked and four times crushed in the ice, Bob Bartlett still answers its call, sailing as he did, the other day from New York for the Arctic. This time his commission is to find out about the nesting and the breeding habits of the greater snow goose, a bird which summers in the Arctic, and winters as far south as Cuba. There always will be something on the waters to lure Capt. Bob, for, as he puts it in his own words:

"I do love the sea as a dog loves its master in spite of clouts he gives it."

Woman Reported Head Of Chinese Pirates

THE Chinese pirates, increasingly active of late, committed their boldest stroke in the seizure of the crack British coastal ship, Shuntien, at the mouth of the Yellow River and the kidnaping of five British subjects. This incident has received worldwide attention, and yet it is but a few months since two other British subjects were killed in a similar affair.

A master mind, with a fleet of fast, armed vessels, is believed behind the pirates. One report, commonly accepted in Shanghai, is that a woman, Lai Choi San, is involved in this racket of the Chinese coast. She is supposed to have as many as 40,000 men working for her, an elaborate spy system in the ports, and lieutenants in command of fortified islands.

The usual practices of the pirates is to plant some of their own men in the crew, overpower the ship officers, and then unload the cargo and the possessions of the crew and the passengers on their own junks. As many as 100 coolies on the larger boats will be in league with the pirates.

A Japanese boat was taken a few weeks ago by an educated pirate who spoke French and Japanese, and who, after robbing 1,000 Chinese fugitives, used the seized ship to prey on other craft before making his escape.

Five renegade Europeans, four of them German and the other an Austro-Swiss, tried their hand at the game recently and came to grief when they ran the Japanese-owned steamship, Sheng Am, aground. To take her they had murdered two Russians, the captain and the mate, the mate's Latvian wife and seven Chinese. The arch-plotters were Capt. Hugo Taudien, 55 years old, once a German soldier in China, and Heinrich Westermann, 45 years old, who survived the European war and then went to Shanghai as a sausage maker. These two, convicted of murder, are under sentence of death in Dairen, Manchukuo.

The three others are to serve from 10 years to life imprisonment. As an account of their trial stated, one would have to go back to the deeds of Morgan and Bluebeard to find a counterpart for the fiendishness of the seizure of the Sheng Am. And the brain of a novelist would be required to conceive Toudien's scheme, which was to sail the ship to South America, there dispose of the rest of the Chinese crew and divide the spoils.

Admiral Reeves 'A Great Guy'

JOSEPH MASON REEVES earned the nickname "Bull" back in 1893, when he was a rip-snorting tackle on the Navy football eleven. He certainly belies it today, for there is nothing of the physique or ferociousness of the bull in his tall, slender figure or white-bearded face. He looks like a professor and he has been that, too. He is also something of an orator as well as being a "swell fellow" to the officers and "a great guy" to the ordinary gob.

He won his spurs on the old Oregon when she made that 14,500 miles dash around South America in 1898 to get in on the Battle of Santiago. He rates in the highest bracket as a tactician and he has a warm spot in his heart for aviation, because he himself is a flier who earned his wings at the age of 53.

And perhaps more than anything else, he is no subscriber to the opinion that the commander should stay away from the front line in battle. His theory in his own words is this:

"If the Old Man up there on his armored bridge can't be licked, every man knows it and those men can't be licked either. That's why a Commander-in-Chief must be right up front himself."
